

CIA bares use of more drug 'guinea pigs'

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — The CIA said Friday it has found additional information that an unknown number of Americans, including alcoholics, drug addicts and terminal cancer patients, may unknowingly have been the subjects of drug experiment programs conducted by the agency in the 1950s and 1960s.

At the direction of President Carter, CIA Director Stansfield

Turner hand-delivered a letter in which he told Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, that he is volunteering to testify on the subject "at the earliest opportunity."

Asked by reporters how serious he thought the matter was, Carter said, "I think it is fairly serious."

The text of Adm. Turner's letter was made public by White House Press Secretary Jody Powell. It said the newly uncovered documents deal with:

—Research on surreptitious methods of administering drugs.

—Experimentation on persons who were drug addicts or alcoholics.

—Research on a knockout or "K" drug that involved advanced cancer patients.

—A possible improper payment to an unnamed private institution.

The letter said the documents pointed to "possible additional cases of drugs being tested on American citizens without their knowledge," beyond those documented by the Senate select committee on intelligence activities that was chaired by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, in 1975.

Drug tests, carried out under the code name "MK-ULTRA," take up a chapter in the final report of the investigation by the Church committee.

During the 1975 inquiry, the CIA reported to the committee, which sought documents about the program, that most documentation on the matter had been destroyed. Turner wrote Inouye in the letter delivered Friday:

"I find it my duty to report to you now that our continuing search for drug-related, as well as other, documents, has uncovered certain papers which bear on this matter. Let me hasten to add that I am persuaded that there was no previous attempt to conceal this material in the original 1975 exploration."

Turner reported that the documents were found in "retired archives filed under financial accounts" and came to light only

Carter OKs entry for more Viets 15,000 Indochina refugees expected

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter gave approval Friday to a State Department request to admit 15,000 Indochinese refugees into the United States, including the 7,000 "boat people" still living on the vessels that they used to flee from Vietnam.

Administration officials said that after more than two weeks of study the White House has agreed with the controversial recommendation by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to alleviate the plight of at least some of the more than 80,000 Indochinese who are stranded in Thailand and throughout Southeast Asia.

Carter told Vance to go ahead with the necessary formalities and ask Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell to use his emergency "parole authority" to admit the 15,000 Laotians, Cambodians and Vietnamese this year and in 1978, officials said.

The attorney general is expected to make the formal announcement of the administration decision Monday, officials said.

MANY MEMBERS of Congress have indicated privately that they are unenthusiastic about having more Indochinese refugees admitted to the country, in addition to the 150,000 already admitted since the takeover by the Communists of the area in 1975.

Under established practice, the attorney general, when using the parole authority, consults with key members of Congress before dealing with immigration affairs.

One of the most important legislators is Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., who heads the Judiciary subcommittee on immigration.

Eilberg, who has a bill pending before the full committee that would allow additional refugees into the country on a quota basis, last week called for an international conference to deal with the problem caused by the unexpected continuing flow of refugees from Indochina.

An aide to Eilberg said he was informed Friday of Carter's approval of the State Department request and that he reserved judgment pending the holding of a hearing by his committee to study the facts.

It has been estimated that the United States has spent more than $500 million in transporting and resettling the 150,000 refugees here. It was believed earlier that it might cost $15 million for the additional 15,000.

Marina protesters vs. police

Houseboat owners skirmish with police in Sausalito Friday in renewed protest against construction of a 224-berth marina. Thirty-six have been arrested in two days.

Killer gas fells 100 in Las Vegas hotel

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A burned-out electric motor probably generated the killer carbon monoxide that filled the 31-story Landmark Hotel early Friday and sickened guests, employees and firemen, fire officials said.

One person died and about 100 were treated. The fumes went through the mushroom-shaped tower's air-conditioning vents after a power failure at 4 a.m., officials said.

About 900 hotel guests returned to the hotel Friday afternoon, having spent about seven hours outside.

Identification of the dead man, a New Yorker in his mid-50s, was withheld while his relatives were notified.

Dr. G. Sheldon Green, Clark County medical examiner, said an autopsy indicated he could have died from "severe heart disease." But Green said the cause of death could not be determined until chemical tests are completed next week.

The fumes started about 4 a.m., when a water pipe broke in the hotel basement and shorted out electricity and telephones, said spokesmen for the Summa Corp., the Howard Hughes firm that owns the hotel.

All the windows in the 18-year-old building were open for the airing out and the evacuated guests stood around watching firemen and security officers don oxygen tanks and gas masks to enter the building.

Richard D. Price, Connecticut Disabled Veterans commander in town for the DAV convention, said he was awakened in his ninth-floor room by fumes about 4 a.m. He got his wife out and notified management.

Earl Bowers of Phoenix, Ariz., said he was asleep on the 20th floor

White House cuts back on staff, but...

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter proposed to Congress on Friday a broad reorganization of the White House that would cut the presidential staff and produce savings estimated at $6 million a year.

But Carter fell well short of carrying out a pledge to cut the White House staff by 30 percent. The announcement claimed a 28 percent reduction, to 351 from 485. However, officials acknowledged that more than half the cutback — 70 jobs — simply would be transferred from the White House payroll to a new central administrative unit within the larger staff of the Executive Office of the President.

Making his first use of reorganization powers given him in April, Carter said he wants to reduce the Executive Office staff by 242 authorized positions, including the White House staff reduction, and eliminate seven Executive Office

SEVERED ARM SEWN BACK ON

A Signal Hill man whose right arm was severed above the elbow while working on a freeway in Newhall was in satisfactory condition Friday night after doctors spent eight hours sewing his arm back together.

Authorities said the man, Harold E. Spaulding, 32, of 1501 E. 33rd St., was installing a new cement divider on a portion of the Golden State Freeway when he caught his arm in machinery shortly before noon.

He was rushed by ambulance to Holy Cross Hospital in San Fernando and then airlifted by Los Angeles County Fire Department helicopter to Orthopedic Hospital in Los Angeles.

Dr. Harrington brought in numerous enforcement-oriented inspectors who made frequent unannounced visits to nursing homes, levied stiff fines and closed down several facilities.

According to the critical department sources, Proconier backed those policies in public but attacked them in private and pressured Dr. Harrington to undo some of her personnel changes and ease up on the nursing homes.

Recently she moved to shut down San Francisco's huge Post Street Convalescent Hospital, but the facility remained open under a new operator, a move Dr. Harrington is said to have opposed bitterly.

A team of doctors and nurses performed the eight-hour surgery after the wound was cleaned and Spaulding then was placed in the intensive-care ward.

A hospital spokeswoman said it was "too early to tell if the arm is going to take or not."

She said the "major problem" would be guarding against infection.

Another controversial move was her decertification of four state mental hospitals — Agnews, Fairview, Napa and Pacific — a step that could cost millions of dollars in federal Medi-Cal funds.

Even before her removal was announced, it was attacked by the Little Hoover Commission, an independent watchdog agency. The commission sent a letter to Lackner asking him to explain the move.

One commission member, Donald Livingston, said Dr. Harrington's division "was the only area in which I saw significant improvement." He said the commission should hold a hearing on her transfer.

N. Koreans will release GI survivor

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — North Korea said today it is ready to turn over an American soldier and the bodies of three others killed when their helicopter was shot down after straying into North Korea on Thursday.

North Korean chief negotiator Han Ju-Kyong said at a meeting of the Military Armistice Commission here that his nation would return the man and the bodies in the spirit of humanitarianism, and in the belief that the U.S.-led United Nations command will take steps to prevent a recurrence of such incidents.

Han spoke after U.S. Navy Rear Adm. Warren C. Hamm told him: "I am prepared to consider any reasonable proposal by your side regarding the return of our personnel and helicopter that innocently violated your airspace."

IN HIS opening statement, Hamm said the incident was "regrettable" and that it was "an unintentional intrusion."

Han then said, "In view of the fact that the United States said it was unintentional, we are going to settle it leniently so that a complicated situation will not develop."

Han did not say when the survivor and the bodies would be returned, but a working meeting was scheduled later this afternoon to discuss when and how the return would be handled.

There was no immediate comment from the White House or the Pentagon.

North Korea identified the survivor as CWO Glenn M. Schwanke, 28, of Spring Green, Wis.

The negotiators met at this truce village in the demilitarized zone between North and South Korea after the North ignored U.S. requests for an earlier meeting.

North Korea's news agency said Friday the crew of the helicopter was repeatedly warned.

"Your side violated our airspace in violation of the armistice agreement," Han told the U.N. Command representatives. "As I have stated before, we are going to settle (this) leniently."

"In consideration of the fact that your side has admitted its military helicopter intruded into

Counsel for Korea 'bribe' probe quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philip Lacovara resigned late Friday as special counsel to the House investigation of alleged Korean influence-buying in Congress in a dispute with the chairman of the ethics committee.

Lacovara sent his resignation to Rep. John Flynt, D-Ga., chairman of the committee conducting the probe, after Flynt was quoted as calling complaints by Lacovara about the slow pace of the probe "arrogant, self-serving, misleading and grossly inaccurate."

Flynt also was quoted in the interview published by the Cox Newspapers as saying he plans to ask Congress' General Accounting Office to audit Lacovara's $35,000 legal bill for January.

Lacovara dictated his letter of resignation from Europe, where he is on vacation.

"It is now evident that the relationship of mutual trust and confidence that must exist between lawyer and client no longer exists," the letter said.

"I see no alternative, therefore, to withdrawing my firm's representation of the committee immediately."

The ethics committee had hired Lacovara's firm and appointed him to head a special staff to investigate allegations that Koreans tried to buy influence with congressmen with cash, gifts and favors.

Lacovara, who was a deputy Watergate prosecutor, had complained in a memorandum July 1 to all committee members that the investigation was being hampered because the panel was not meeting often enough.

In response, Flynt scheduled meetings every Wednesday over

Cal. nursing home 'enforcer' fired

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A woman who led a state crackdown on nursing homes was removed from her job Friday amid allegations that Gov. Brown's administration was giving in to the nursing home industry.

Two Health Department staffers and one source close to the state's Little Hoover Commission, all of whom asked not to be named, charged that the industry had pressured Deputy Health Director Ray Proconier to transfer Dr. Charlene Harrington.

Proconier had declined comment. The department gave no reason for Dr. Harrington's transfer to a new job as special assistant on nursing care to the department director, Dr. Jerome Lackner. The post pays the same $30,000 annual salary she made in her old job.

She is succeeded as head of the licensing and certification division by Donald Hauptman, 43, formerly the division's associate director and a veteran state investigator.

Dr. Harrington, 35, was brought in last August to head the division, which oversees 40,000 community care facilities and nursing homes, and also licenses state mental hospitals.

In the past, state supervision of nursing homes has been characterized by infrequent inspections, followed by efforts to get the homes' operators to make changes on their own.

Hostess prepares for Carter . . .

Combined News Services

For the next few days, Elizabeth Thompson Cooper will be busy getting her two-story home in Yazoo City, Miss., ready for a special guest — the President of the United States.

"It's the sort of thing you never expect to happen to you," Mrs. Cooper, wife of industrialist Owen Cooper, said Friday. "We want this to be an experience that will bring good to our country, that will help our community and will be good for the president."

During his "meet-the-people" visit next Thursday, Carter will be staying in a home built by the Coopers after their first residence burned in the early 1960s. The home, located in an established residential area of this community of 12,000, is finished in brick with wrought iron grill work.

"We don't pretend to have a pretentious home," she said. "It's a home where five children were raised and it's sort of child-proof. We have reserved the living room and dining room for more formal occasions and believe me, I'm glad."

Liz reneges

When she married Richard Burton for the second time, in the tiny settlement of Kasane in northern Botswana, Elizabeth Taylor pledged, as a measure of her honeymoon happiness, to donate $350,000 to improve the local hospital. She has changed her mind since her divorce from Burton and her marriage to John D. Warner.

A Botswana ministry of health official said Miss Taylor now will provide about $43,000 to build two health clinics, scaling down her original gift because her marriage to Warner changed her tax status in the United States.

Mrs. Cooper and her husband, who headed the Southern Baptist Convention from 1972-73, often entertain guests and "through the years this has been one of our greatest pleasures."

Mrs. Cooper said the president had indicated he wanted a family atmosphere during the one-night stay, and "most of our children and their families plan to be here."

"We'll have a full house and that will be great," she said.

The Coopers met the Carters while the president was governor of Georgia.

"Owen was invited to be Gov. Carter's guest speaker at his very first prayer breakfast," she said. "The major reason we became friends with the Carters is because of our mutual involvement in church-related activities."

She said that while she would have help available before the presidential visit, "I'll be pretty busy getting the house and the yard ready."

"I plan to have our yard looking like it was gone over with tweezers by next Thursday," she said.

Princess born

King Carl XVI Gustaf of Sweden gave a name Friday to his and Queen Silvia's daughter, born Thursday: Victoria Ingrid Alice Desiree. There was joy in Stockholm, and Parliament is toying with the idea of changing the law so that she could succeed her father.

The 31-year-old king attended his daughter's birth in Karolinska hospital, the first royal birth in a public hospital. The parents and child were driven home a few hours later.

King Carl Gustaf was the first Swedish monarch in 178 years to become a father during his reign.

. . . but last 'host' unhappy

Four months ago, residents of Clinton, Mass., beamed with pride at the prospect of a visit from President Carter and hoped the publicity would give the town a boost. But since then, Clinton has sunk into its worst economic slump since the Great Depression.

On March 16, Carter attended a special town meeting at the Clinton Town Hall, then spent the night with the family of a local beer distributor. The town meeting was carried live on national television, and residents of this out-of-the-way town exclaimed they were finally being put on the map.

But the next day, the Colonial Press, once Clinton's biggest employer, announced it was going out of business.

The book printing company laid off about 750 workers. Another 360 have been out of work for 15 weeks because of a strike at the Ray O Vac flashlight battery plant.

In a town of 13,500, the loss of these jobs has been disastrous.

Alan Jewett, chairman of the town selectmen, says he expects the unemployment rate in July to be 14 percent — almost double the level when Carter came to town.

"It certainly put Clinton on the map, but I don't know what it's done for us," said Robert J. Fitzgerald, manager of the Clinton branch of the Worcester County National Bank.

Many Clinton residents had hoped that Carter's visit would help attract jobs to town, but druggist Francis Messenger says people do not blame the president for all that has happened since.

"I don't think the fact that he came here had any effect," he said. "A lot of unfortunate things have happened. Our economy collapsed. But you can't blame him for that."

Ray Philbin, 66, a life-long Clinton resident, said "After Carter came, the roof fell in. I don't see how we have any future now. For a young fellow, there's nothing here."

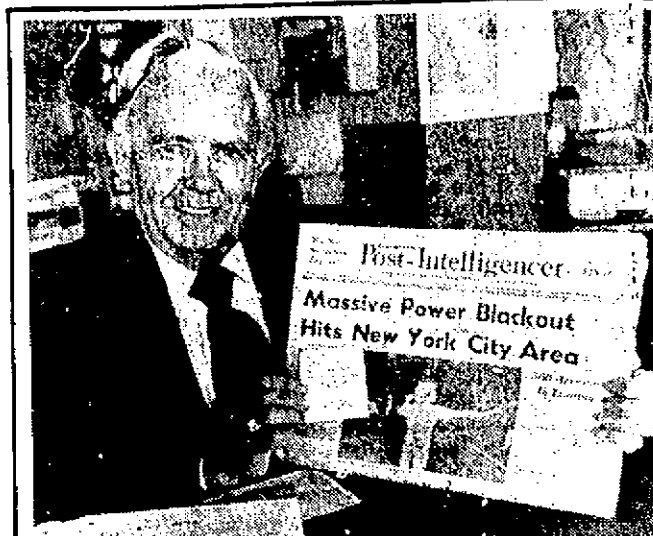

Agnews sell home

The two-story, colonial-style home of former vice president Spiro T. Agnew has been sold to an insurance agent for about $160,000.

The Agnews reportedly will move out of the home in Arnold, Md., where they have lived for three years, some time in August or September, and move to Palm Springs.

New owner George Ebersberger said he did not buy it because of the previous owner. "If John Doe lived there, I'd still want it," he said.

The brick and clapboard house has 11 rooms and a double garage on 1 1/4 acres.

ROGE THE MAGICIAN compares copy of Seattle newspaper to a note he apparently wrote two days earlier 'predicting' — correctly — what the headline would be.

Magician forecast blackout — or was it just a trick?

New York Mayor Abraham Beame might have been better prepared for his city's massive blackout this week if he'd had a certain little white-haired magician from Salinas, Cal., on his staff.

The man, who calls himself Roge (pronounced roh-jay), walked into the news offices of The Seattle Post Intelligencer here Tuesday and seemingly 'predicted' the blackout two days before it happened — at least he 'predicted' Thursday morning's top front-page headline.

Roge, 52, was in Seattle to help publicize the Pacific Coast Association of Magicians convention.

He wrote down his prediction, put it in a small envelope, enclosed it in four more sealed envelopes, left the packet with the city editor and walked out.

In opening the packet on Thursday, after the blackout had occurred, Roge slit the envelopes with his own letter opener, then passed the slit envelope containing the 'prediction' to city editor Steve Green, who pulled out the contents.

The note, opened after the final Thursday edition was printed, said, "I predict the banner story 7/14 P-I final edition will be: Massive Power Blackout Hits New York City Area."

The headline in the paper: "Massive Power Blackout Hits New York City Area. 500 Arrested in Looting."

Begin brings plan

Combined News Services

NEW YORK — Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel said Friday he has a complete Mideast peace plan to show President Carter when the two leaders meet next week.

Arriving in New York on his first journey abroad since his conservative Likud bloc won the Israeli elections May 17, Begin told reporters he was ready to negotiate on every issue of the Mideast conflict.

But he repeated his refusal to accept a Palestinian state on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, saying it would put Israel "in mortal danger."

Israeli officials appeared confident that Begin's three meetings with Carter would go smoothly, and initial misgivings in Washington over hawkish Begin's rise to power would be overcome.

Welfare shifts studied

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is considering whether it should cut back welfare allotments to low-income families that also receive federal housing subsidies.

But government sources said the president was highly unlikely to accept a much broader proposal that would eliminate almost the entire $5-billion-a-year federal housing subsidy program to transfer the money to welfare reform.

Although a high government official closely involved in the preparation of the administration's welfare proposal said the idea was unlikely to get far, it nevertheless provoked an uproar at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, where officials took it as a major threat to their entire urban program.

Inside Idi's horror prison

TORONTO, Canada — Toronto Star reporter Gerald Utting says in a copy-right story from London that his cell at Uganda's Makindye prison, where he was confined for three weeks, was covered with filth and spattered with blood.

Utting, 46, was detained by security forces at Entebbe Airport on June 22 after he flew to Uganda, evidently to research a story. Official Uganda radio said he was arrested for entering the country without a permit. Ugandan dictator Idi Amin had the reporter released and flown to Britain on Wednesday aboard a Ugandan commercial airplane.

Utting's story from London said his cell had a wooden trap door in one part of the roof, with spots of blood around the door. At one end of the cell was a small room that contained some pipes high in the wall for showering. There

He said Amin later told him in a five-hour interview he wanted Utting to see the inside of the prison and to describe to the Western press the kind of conditions he saw and the kind of food he was served.

"Let me say right now that nobody beat me," Utting said. "I saw nobody killed or beaten by the military police and I was fed — although it was not the kind of food mother used to make."

Hearing

I have just graduated from Long Beach State University. While attending the school I carried the medical insurance offered to students. In January I had to have some corrective surgery on my nose. In June, after many battles with the insurance company, they finally paid one third of the surgeon's bill. I cannot afford to pay the outstanding $596, since I also have $1,000 in student loans to pay back.

I went to the Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services to apply for some kind of aid. I was told I should have applied within three months of the surgery and there was nothing I could do now. I couldn't have applied for public aid sooner because I didn't know the insurance company wasn't going to pay all my medical expenses. Can Action Line help? T.P., Seal Beach.

You can go ahead and formally apply for state assistance through the Medically Needy Only program administered by DPSS. When you are denied because of the three-month time limit, you can request a fair hearing, which will give you the chance to explain to State Health Department officials why you feel an exception should be made in your case.

However, a spokeswoman for DPSS said the fact that you now are employed and have a college degree may work against you. "The state generally is very strict about the three-month limit," she said. "And they also will base their decision on the client's present financial circumstances, not on his income at the time of the surgery."

Low gear

I bought a 1977 Honda Civic station wagon in January. On March 28, on my way to San Diego, the transmission blew up and I had to have it towed to Hoehn Motors in Carlsbad. They said the transmission failed due to lack of transmission fluid.

A few days later I found out that Honda claims the warranty does not cover damage incurred due to lack of lubricant, so I would have to bear the $700 expense myself. In the meantime, no loaner car was available, so I have been without transportation, and my car still is at Hoehn Motors while they try to locate a replacement transmission. It has been more than three months now. Can Action Line get any results for me? J.T.K., Long Beach.

Your transmission was shipped from Japan on June 10, and is expected to arrive here anytime.

According to a customer service spokesman for American Honda Motor Co. in Gardena, who was very familiar with your problem, you refused to accept a transmission put together from available new components, and insisted instead on a factory assembled transmission. He said you were told at the time that it would have to be ordered from Japan and that delivery would take some time.

Big bills

I am having a problem with unusually high electricity bills from Southern California Edison Co. When I first bought my all-electric home 18 months ago, my first electric bill was $200 for 60 days. SCE told me at that time it was from the electric heating system, so I cut way back on my use of the heat. My next bill was about $60, then it went back up to $150.

SCE has been out to check my meter, my heater and my appliances, and say everything is all right, but I am still getting huge bills. The last one was $288 for 91 days of service. I have not heated the house for the last four months, and can't afford these ridiculous bills. Is there anything Action Line can do? Mrs. Q.F., Lynwood.

No. George Hanawalt of the Long Beach SCE office says they have reviewed your account and do not find your monthly charges to be excessive. He said many of your bills have been high because an unpaid portion of previous statements has been added on to current charges.

"The customer managed to cut her usage down once and reduce her bill, so it shows it can be done," Hanawalt told Action Line. "We have no way of knowing how much heat, hot water and how many other appliances are used in the household. We only know what the meter has recorded."

He said he has arranged for an SCE energy conservation specialist to come to your home to discuss your bill and explain ways to save energy.

Rude awakening

Why can't there be some kind of regulation to have people put out their trash cans at a reasonable hour? Our next door neighbor goes to work at 4:45 a.m. and drags his metal trash cans out every week at 4:30 a.m., making all the noise he can. Can't anything be done? Mrs. C.C., Long Beach.

The only ordinance pertaining to the placing of trash cans at curb or alley for rubbish collection simply says the cans must be put out after 6 p.m. the night before collection or before 6 a.m. on trash pick-up day. It further specifies that the emptied cans must be removed from the curb within 12 hours of garbage collection.

Why can't there be some kind of regulation to have people put out their trash cans at a reasonable hour? Our next door neighbor goes to work at 4:45 a.m. and drags his metal trash cans out every week at 4:30 a.m., making all the noise he can. Can't anything be done? Mrs. C.C., Long Beach.

Your only recourse might be to call the police with a complaint of disturbing the peace, but since the disturbance occurs only once a week and for a very short period of time, it would be considered a very low priority call.

County, attorneys in impasse on pay

By Al Murrell
Staff Writer

County negotiators Friday declared an impasse in their mediation session with representatives of deputy district attorneys and deputy public defenders.

Deputy District Attorney Joe Siler, who is on the lawyers' bargaining committee, said the impasse was declared after the lawyers' group unanimously rejected the county's latest salary offer.

Siler said negotiators for both sides met with state mediator David Hart Friday morning and that the county presented "substantially the same offer" the attorneys overwhelmingly rejected earlier in the week.

He said the next step is for the county to call in a fact-finder to evaluate the situation. The fact-finder's evaluation will not be binding to either side, he said.

In addition to voting against the county's earlier offer, the public defenders began refusing to accept new cases Wednesday. They have vowed to continue the job action until they agree to a satisfactory contract.

The lawyers also voted that if anyone was suspended or dismissed for refusing cases, the prosecutors and public defenders would strike.

Siler said the rejection of new cases "has been virtually unanimous" across the county.

According to a memorandum distributed to the prosecutors and public defenders in Long Beach, the offer presented by the county Friday called for a 6.25 percent pay raise in a one-year contract.

The offer rejected by a 95 percent majority at a recent meeting of more than 300 lawyers in Los Angeles was for the same increase in the first year of a two-year contract.

However, the lawyers would have received a raise equal to 70 percent of the cost of living increase in the second year.

Several attorneys from the Long Beach office said after the Tuesday meeting that the proposal for the second year was the major problem with the first offer.

Siler said Friday, however, that it "was well-known (in Los Angeles) that we could have a one-year contract if we wanted it."

None of some 12 Long Beach attorneys interviewed Friday knew that a one-year contract was available.

Siler said one "extremely important issue" which must be settled is an automatic step increase from grade two to grade three.

Under the old contract, which expired June 30, no one could advance to grade three unless another grade-three deputy was promoted or left the office.

As a result, Siler said, there are many attorneys "with very little hope of promotion."

He said a 1976 study shows that a grade-two attorney with five years experience earns $14,000 a year less than the average salary paid to private attorneys with the same experience in 10 major Los Angeles-area law firms.

Navy desertion rate hits 1,100 a month

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — More than 1,100 members of the U.S. Navy are jumping ship every month, the highest rate in the history of the service, an official report disclosed Friday.

The Navy says there were 12,886 desertions in the 11 months ending June 1, the Norfolk Ledger-Star reported.

The newspaper, quoting a report obtained from Navy sources, said there are 436,000 enlisted personnel in the Navy and 31 of every 1,000 will desert this year.

Being absent without leave for more than 30 days makes a sailor a deserter.

The Navy report said nearly all deserters eventually turn themselves in or are picked up, but only two of 1,000 are convicted of desertion.

About 900 of every 1,000 are "administratively separated," according to the report, "or convicted of the lesser offense of unauthorized absence and then given a bad-conduct discharge." A sailor convicted of desertion can face a prison term.

The Air Force desertion rate is less than one per 1,000; the Army's is about one per 1,000, and the Marine Corps' is about four per 1,000, a Pentagon spokesman said.

man said.

"Basically, I think it is a lack of maturity on their part," said the Navy officer in charge of reviewing the cases of deserters returned to Norfolk Naval Station.

"But we have no simple, overall solution," a spokesman for the Bureau of Naval Personnel in Washington said.

According to the bureau spokesman, when the Navy started keeping desertion statistics in 1942, the rate was 5.5 desertions for every 1,000 enlisted personnel. By 1973 the rate was up to 13.6 and now is 31 per 1,000.

"It's a reflection of our current society, I believe," said Cmdr. William Tredick, who reviews the records of deserters at the naval base here. "They are mostly people who never seem to be able to finish any job they start."

According to an attrition task force, the typical Navy deserter is a male, 18 to 20 years old, new to the Navy and serving aboard ship. He probably did not graduate from high school and is in the lower intelligence levels, the report said.

Women in the Navy seldom desert, officials said.

Congress adrift in postcard sea

By Gil Bailey
Knight-Ridder Service

WASHINGTON — Congress is being deluged with thousands of computerized postcards, most from conservative political action groups, and is answering with computerized letters that cost thousands of dollars.

Some House members have received more than 1,000 postcards each since Jan. 1. One U.S. senator's office reported receiving 5,000 cards on two issues in two days last week.

"It is computer talking to computer," a House staff member said.

House members respond to the thousands of identical messages by running the names of the senders through a computer, which produces hundreds of identical replies.

Each reply costs the taxpayers at least 20 cents — 13 cents for the frank which replaces a stamp, and seven cents for stationery, envelope, computer time and staff time.

The total cost to the taxpayer, if each member of Congress receives 1,000 such cards, will exceed $100,000 this year.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., has received 57,000 such postcards, almost all urging conservative causes. He received 20,000 postcards urging a vote against permitting "situation picketing," a major and successful conservative cause.

The House, subjected to a similar campaign, voted down legislation permitting siting picketing.

The computerized postcard operation is an outgrowth of successful computerized appeals for funds in political campaigns. Lists are developed and tested with mailings.

When people respond to a mailing, they are placed on a permanent list for similar appeals.

The messages in the postcards are short and sharp. One said: "I am absolutely horrified that you and others in Congress are even considering the 'instant voter' registration bill. It will destroy the taxpaying American citizen's vote."

"I WANT MY VOTE TO COUNT!"

"Please vote against 'instant voter' registration and save my vote. And let me know how you voted."

A second said:

"I strongly oppose any change in the Hatch Act. It appears to me that this is another attempt by Congress to keep themselves permanently in office. Please vote against this partisan political grab. Let's keep our 2,700,000 government employees out of politics."

"Please write to me in the next few days and tell me how you plan to vote on the matter."

Repeat mailings are frequent, so unless each congressman checks for duplication, the same reply may be sent to the same person again and again.

Jon Minarik of the Public Service Research Council, which sent out the Hatch Act postcard, believes the cards are effective.

Minarik noted that Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., a liberal, voted "present" on an amendment to the Hatch Act authored by Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, a conservative, which said no union dues paid by government employees could be used for political purposes, citing that vote as an example of the power of the postcard system.

Burton's office reported that he received 650 cards on the subject. However, a spokeswoman said Burton voted "present" because the amendment was offered late at night and he was not clear about its effect.

Minarik's organization first obtained a list of names from Richard Vi-guerie, a Virginia political fund-raiser for conservative politicians.

At present the organization has a list of names "approaching 1 million" which it calls upon for both funds and for the mailing of the postcards.

By computer, the message is printed on the card.

All the recipient has to do is to sign the card and place a stamp on it.

Lance 'sorry' he broke pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance, a former Georgia banker, apologized to a Senate panel Friday for having broken his pledge to steer clear of bank regulation policy while in government.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee then took under advisement President Carter's request that Lance be released from his promise at his confirmation hearing to sell all his stock in the National Bank of Georgia by next Dec. 31.

Lance testified that the price of the stock has gone down since he borrowed more than $3.5 million to buy it and that he will take a huge loss if an arbitrary time limit for its sale is set.

Lance said that if he were forced to sell his stock now he would lose $1.6 million.

The hearing's emphasis on Lance's financial troubles and the plea to excuse him from his own conflict-of-interest pledge may himself from any actual or apparent conflict of interest.

Proxmire had complained that on June 28 Lance wrote to the Senate-House conference considering the pending Community Reinvestment Act to oppose a section aimed at the practice of redlining, which as a matter of policy bars bank loans in certain neighborhoods.

Lance said he signed such a staff-prepared letter under the impression that it dealt with housing policy, not banking.

"If I violated that pledge, and there is perhaps a weight of feeling that I did, I apologize to this committee, and I apologize to Sen. Proxmire," Lance said.

He said that in the future he will have his deputy handle all such matters.

Fourteen of the committee's 16 members, an unusually high percentage, were present for all or part of Lance's appearance.

Some expressed concern at the fact that his outstanding debts total $5.3 million as opposed to assets totaling about $8 million.

Others said disclosure of assets and liabilities is sufficient to eliminate the possibility of conflict of interest and that it is unnecessary to require divestiture.

Still others said Congress has no standard to deal with the conflict of interest problem and requires one thing of one nominee and something entirely different of another.

Lance, head of the Office of Management and Budget, which supervises the spending of hundreds of billions of federal dollars, acknowledged that he had a "problem" just in paying the estimated $373,000 in annual interest on his personal loans.

Asked how he proposed to make the interest payments in view of his reduced income, Lance replied:

"That's a matter my trustee will have to deal with. . . I do have other assets that may be liquidated."

"Private life is being put on the half shell," said Sen. John H. Heinz III, R-Pa., in commenting on the questions.

"I think we've gone completely ethics happy around this place," said Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. "We're driving good people out of government."

But Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., said his concern is Lance's promise and the confidence of the public in government.

"This agreement was arrived at with great fanfare, great publicity," Roth said. "And then when the going gets rough there's a request for an extension."

$25-million suggested
Indian land demands held fair

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's adviser on Indian land claims in Maine recommended Friday that the federal government give $25 million to the Indians and the State of Maine turn over 100,000 acres for them.

Carter called the recommendations "fair, judicious and wise." But the president did not say what course he would follow.

He met with retired Georgia Supreme Court Judge William Gunter, who has been investigating for the past three months the claims of the Passamaquoddy and Penobscot Indians. Gunter said he was "hopeful we will get the consent of the two tribes."

He presented his recommendations in a four-page report and suggested Carter make the recommendations to Congress to resolve a problem he said dates back to colonial days.

"One of the most difficult and sensitive and controversial issues since I've been in office was to treat the Indians fairly and also to resolve questions hanging there more than 200 years," Carter said at the start of his meeting with Gunter.

The tribes have claimed more than 12 million acres, which amount to 60 percent of the state's land area, and $25 billion.

Gunter, speaking with reporters at the White House after conferring with Carter and White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz in the Oval Office, said the claim "isn't worth a fraction" of the $25 billion the Indians are seeking.

In his recommendations, Gunter suggested that:

—The two tribes be assured that they would be given normal benefits by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

—Maine be asked to continue appropriations for the Indians at a rate equal to the average annual appropriation over the past five years.

—The secretary of the interior be required to try to acquire long-term options on an additional 100,000 acres in the claims area for the Indians, who could then buy the land at a fair market value with tribal funds.

He said if the state and the Indians agree to the 100,000-acre settlement and the annual state appropriation, the other land claims should be wiped out.

If the tribe does not agree to the recommendations, he said, Congress should abolish the claims and the Indians could sue for the land in court.

If Maine does not agree to the recommendations, Gunter said, Congress should appropriate $25 million for the tribes and the tribal land claims could then be settled in court.

"If the tribes win their cases, they recover the state-owned land; but if they lose their cases, they recover nothing," he wrote in his report to the President.

The outcome of the dispute has been seen as a possible model for other Indian land claims across the country. Gunter already is studying the claims of the Mashpee Indians in Massachusetts.

The Justice Department has said it would file suit against Maine on behalf of the Indians to recover the land. But state officials and representatives of the tribes have been trying to negotiate a settlement with Gunter's help.

The Indians claim the land is theirs because it was ceded to the state without congressional approval, as required by a 1790 act.

White House aide trying to cool off Kent State feud

By David Hess
Knight-Ridder Service

WASHINGTON—The White House has stepped in quietly to try to cool off a confrontation at Kent State University centering on the site of the May 4, 1970, shootings.

A White House official has contacted leading figures in the confrontation and suggested that they seek "outside mediation" to resolve the dispute over plans to build a new gymnasium on the site.

University trustees have voted to put the gym near the spot where Ohio National Guardsmen opened fire on students during an antiwar demonstration, killing four and wounding nine. The trustees are pitted against a coalition of students and the victims' parents who want the gym built elsewhere on the sprawling campus.

Margaret Costanza, assistant to President Carter, said she has talked by telephone with student leader Alan Canfora. KSU President Glenn A. Olds and KSU Trustees Chairman George Janek.

In those conversations, Ms. Costanza said, she "congratulated" them on the "peacefulness" of arrests made this week when campus police rounded up and booked 193 demonstrators on Blanket Hill, near the site of the proposed gym.

"We are keeping an eye on it, and we are telling everyone concerned that we are deeply concerned that this situation not get out of hand," Ms. Costanza said. "It has already escalated into a national issue."

She said she was also concerned about a rally scheduled for Friday when the student-parent group — known as the May 4 Coalition — plans to sponsor a national demonstration against the proposed gym site.

"YOU GET A GROUP of kids who are sincere, displaying their clear support for or against a certain decision," Ms. Costanza said, "and then you have the outside fringes who love to see a confrontation — and they try to bring their own not-so-clear motives to bear on the scene. In the minds of the authorities, especially the police, it's hard to separate the two."

Ms. Costanza did not suggest any mediators. Others, however, have suggested the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, headed by Gilbert Pompa, who, reliable sources have confirmed, indicated a willingness to "look into the situation" if invited.

Others mentioned include the Institute for Mediation and Conflict Resolution and the Community Disputes Service Division of the American Arbitration Association, both of New York; the University of Missouri's Community Conflict Resolution Program, and former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton, who headed the President's Commission on Campus Unrest, which investigated the Kent killings.

Canfora, contacted at Kent, did not rule out mediation but said the "question would have to be put to a vote of the coalition." In an earlier vote, coalition members rejected the idea.

KSU President Olds, who is leaving Kent this week to begin forming a new university in Anchorage, Alaska, said mediation would probably be fruitless because "the real issue here is not the new building at all."

Instead, Olds argued, "what's at stake here is seven years of unresolved guilt and anguish over what happened in 1970 and the anger aroused by the Vietnam war."

Panama's price snags treaty talks on canal

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A snag has developed in the Panama Canal treaty talks over a Panamanian demand for $1 billion immediately and $200 million a year for the rest of the century as the price for a continued U.S. role in the waterway, according to a senior American official.

Reporters attending a briefing by U.S. co-negotiator Sol Linowitz were told that the two sets of money demands could sabotage efforts to agree to a new treaty. The Carter administration considers the Panamanian proposals unacceptable.

Under the existing treaty, the U.S. pays Panama $2.3 million annually and reportedly is offering to raise that to $30 million.

Linowitz reportedly said that under the best of circumstances the two sides will be able to overcome their differences and have a treaty prepared for Senate consideration before the Aug. 5 recess. At worst, the negotiations could collapse, leading to renewed anti-American violence in the Canal Zone.

The two nations have been negotiating almost continuously since May 9.

Poland cuts in on used-car sales

By George Brodzki
Associated Press

WARSAW — The government is speeding delivery of new cars to stall a flourishing private automobile trade that has turned thousands of Poles into weekend car salesmen.

Every Sunday, hundreds of Poles rent spaces in lots set aside by major cities throughout the country and offer to sell their old or new cars. The demand is high because the wait for new cars is at least four years.

The Polski Fiat 125, a four-door sedan with a 1.5-liter engine, sells on the official market new for 185,000 zlotys, or $9,250 at the official exchange rate and less than half that at the rate given U.S. Social Security recipients living in Poland. But the Fiat 125s can fetch up to 250,000 zlotys ($12,500 official) on the weekend market.

The Sunday used-car salesmen are acting legally, and each major city sets aside a lot for about 1,000 cars where spaces can be rented.

Sources said the new program, which took effect last week, is aimed at getting Poles to spend their extra money for cars rather than for food and other consumer items in short supply.

Wages have risen considerably since last December's food-price riots, and most food prices have remained the same. The ability to buy is greater, but industry is only now starting to switch from heavy industrial goods to consumer products such as cars and vacuum cleaners.

The average monthly wage in Poland is 4,100 zlotys ($205 official). But many families have two or more incomes, bringing average income closer to 10,000 zlotys.

Under the new program, Poles willing to pay an extra 33,000 zlotys ($1,650 official) can get delivery of new cars within four weeks.

Although the surcharge is steep — nearly a third the price of small imported models — the buyer receives a full guarantee and has to pay no sales tax, which runs from 5 to 20 percent for most other car buys.

The government recently doubled the customs duty for all imported cars, virtually halting new auto imports.

No figures were released to indicate how many Poles have opted for the surcharge. The official Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu published a lengthy article outlining what it said were the advantages of the plan, leading to specula-

S. Africa poet beats terror rap

New York Times Service

PRETORIA — The trial of Breyten Breytenbach, perhaps South Africa's leading poet, reached an abrupt conclusion Friday when a judge in the Supreme Court here found him not guilty of promoting anti-government terrorism from an isolation cell in the maximum security block of Pretoria central prison.

The country was astonished by the acquittal, which was accompanied by conviction on a relatively minor charge of illicitly sending letters out of the prison. The case had been a sensation for more than a month, but the 37-year-old poet was given little chance of beating the elaborate indictment against him.

THE CASE seemed as much a rite of excommunication as a trial, in which the government sought to mete out punishment to an Afrikaner who scorned fame among his own people for an ill-fated plunge into the politics of subversion.

If there were government supporters who saw it that way, so, too, did some of the adherents of the black nationalist cause in which the poet enlisted. Yet as the evidence unfolded, it became increasingly apparent that he was neither traitor nor martyr, but a confused romantic who seemed unsure of where his loyalties lay.

New blow to economy seen

British unions end pay restraint

By Robert Merry
Knight News Service

LONDON — Britain's sagging economy took a new blow Friday when rebellious trade union leaders rejected the Labor government's plea for one more year of pay restraint.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey offered tax cuts and more welfare benefits to clutch the pay deal, but the unionists rejected his request that new wage settlements should not exceed 10 percent and that each deal should last for a full 12 months.

Instead, the railroad workers demanded a 63 percent increase in pay. Car workers said they wanted 15 percent. Supervisory staffs and technicians said their policy would be, "The sky's the limit."

For two years, wages in Britain have been kept down to a 4-to-6 percent increase under the "social contract" agreement between the unions and the government. But a continuing inflation rate of 17 percent finally killed the contract as workers told the union they would not suffer any further decline in living standards.

In the attempt to prevent a wage explosion of the type that sent British inflation soaring four years ago, Healey went to the House of Commons Friday to announce he was giving some money away.

Income tax, he said, would go down by 1 percent, to a standard rate of 34 percent.

To help families cope with rising prices, Healey said the government would pay parents $4 a week for each child, or $1.50 more than at present. More children would also qualify to eat free meals at school. In food subsidies, the government will pay more to stabilize the price of milk.

With unemployment at 1.5 million, Healey announced a $200 million government boost to the construction industry, which is currently in the midst of its worst depression in 25 years. The aim, he said, is to build more houses and also to revive housing in the inner cities.

The new strategy, Healey said, would cost the treasury $2.1 billion. He appealed for continued union support for the government and said it was vital for Britain that soaring pay increases should be drastically trimmed.

Healey said the "social contract" had been successful in cutting inflation from 30 percent to 17 percent. He said, under his plan, price rises would fall sharply in the coming year and a single-digit inflation rate could be achieved.

The Tory opposition spokesman, Sir Geoffrey Howe, disputed the contention that the "social contract" had worked well. Howe wondered if the government would be strong enough to withstand any major inflationary pay increase.

While the politicians were speaking, the unions were holding their annual conferences. Delegates said the time had come to "remove the shackles" of pay restraint and to return to free collective bargaining.

The pound sterling has, for the last few months, been stable at around $1.72. Pessimists in London's foreign exchange market said a wage explosion would hit foreign confidence in Britain hard and the pound could lose more of its international value.

Kin of Yanks missing abroad flay consular service apathy

WASHINGTON — Under fire for the way it allegedly mishandled several recent investigations into the disappearances or deaths of Americans overseas, the State Department, a high department official has conceded, may not be adequately meeting the needs of Americans traveling abroad.

"It is fast becoming obvious that all of our available resources are unable to meet the growing demands for consular services levied on us by the public we serve," said Barbara Watson, administrator of State's Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs, in testimony before a House International Relations subcommittee.

"We are confronted with a revolution of rising expectations" with regard to the consular services the traveling American public demands and . . .

Colombia mine blast kills 120

AMAGA, Colombia (AP) — Rescue workers wearing oxygen masks found 88 bodies and searched for more Friday in an explosion-torn coal mine where about 120 miners died, according to Red Cross estimates.

About 130 miners were changing shifts Thursday morning inside the Villa Diana mine near this northern Colombia town of 15,000 when a blast believed to have been triggered by gases ripped through the mine about one mile from the entrance. Eight miners escaped.

"The other workers were breaking up coal deposits with dynamite when we heard a tremendous explosion," said one survivor, Gildardo Garcia. "All of us started running. Many were trapped by rocks and coal, but the greatest destruction came from plain desperation."

"We all wanted to escape and we trampled each other. I managed to slip out through an opening in all the tons of rock and coal."

ANOTHER survivor, Leonardo Sanchez, said he felt "wind on my face. Then there was an explosion that caused a cave-in and trapped about 120 of my fellow workers. Everybody was shouting 'We're going to die, we're going to die' and I tried to get from under all the coal but the fumes made me choke," Sanchez said.

Rescuers said they found the bodies of miners who had embraced each other before they succumbed, apparently to gas.

Jesus Hernandez, president of the local miners' union, claimed the mine was unsafe and that its owner, Empresa Industrial Hullea, was responsible. Administrators of Antioquia province and mine engineers said the Villa Diana was the most modern mine in the Amaga coal zone.

Engineers predicted it would take four months to reopen the mine.

Italian Reds cast vote with government

ROME (AP) — The Communist Party voted with the government Friday for the first time in 30 years, joining the ruling Christian Democrats in a program to meet growing crime and economic problems.

Five and four other parties worked on the measures approved Friday night by the House of Deputies.

The Communists finished a close second to the traditionally dominant Christian Democrats in June 1976 elections.

the resources at our disposal are not sufficient to meet these new and unprecedented requirements," she said.

Private individuals who spoke at the hearing told horror stories of the inept or insensitive treatment they encountered from State Department officials when relatives disappeared overseas. The statements included:

—Testimony by the father of Edmund Horman, an American who was making a movie in Chile at the time of the revolution in 1973. Pulled from his home and taken away by Chilean police, he was shot on Sept. 20. Knowing only that his son had been taken by police, Horman went to Chile on Oct. 5 to look for him.

He went to the National Stadium where many prisoners were kept and spoke over a public address system, entreating his son to come forward if he was there. Accompanying Horman was a U.S. consular official who had known for two weeks — but did not tell him — that his son had been shot.

—Testimony by the family of Delilah Yoder, the Arlington (Va.) County social worker who disappeared with a traveling companion in Ecuador last summer. The pair disappeared while in the company of an Ecuadorian who had figured in the questionable death of another American six months earlier, but the U.S. Consul in Ecuador did not investigate and did not tell private investigators hired by the Yoder family about the other American's death.

—Testimony by the family of Jane Bissell, a 35-year-old former Peace Corps volunteer who later vanished in another Ecuadorian town. An Australian with whom Bissell had been traveling reported her disappearance, but consular officers in the U.S. Embassy in Ecuador failed to ask even elementary questions which might have provided information for use in tracking her.

Neither Yoder, her traveling companion, nor Bissell have ever been heard of again.

WHILE defending the work of consular officers, Miss Watson admitted that the service is hurt by low morale and understaffing. The State Department, however, has been working to overcome these problems, she said.

To serve the approximately 7.5 million Americans who annually travel overseas, in addition to those Americans who live abroad, the State Department has consular officers in 250 posts around the world.

But in 163 of those countries, there are two or fewer full-time consular workers to handle cases involving imprisonments, deaths (10,000 Americans a year die abroad), disappearances, illnesses, and immigration and financial emergencies.

In any given year, about 7,000 Americans disappear overseas and, despite the small consular staffs, there are currently only 13 missing Americans whose whereabouts remain unknown, said Robert T. Hennermeyer, Miss Watson's deputy.

Miss Watson said she has been talking within the State Department about the necessity of making the consular service a "full-fledged arm of foreign policy" and that she has sensed "a keen interest" in the agency concerning such a change.

Earlier this year the House International Relations Committee ordered the secretary of state to do a comprehensive review of consular functions. The report, by the Inspector General's Office, is to be completed Dec. 1.

Plot charge 'shocks' Mrs. Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Friday a charge by the home minister that her government considered killing opposition leaders was "shocking, preposterous and without any basis."

Home Minister Charan Singh told parliament Wednesday that Mrs. Gandhi's government had given "some thought to shooting top opposition leaders" during the 21-month emergency.

Deputies from Mrs. Gandhi's Congress Party walked out of parliament Thursday after Singh refused to withdraw his allegation and did not substantiate it to their satisfaction.

Mrs. Gandhi's formal statement was one of the few times she has responded publicly to allegations against her period of authoritarian rule, initiated in June 1975 to quell antigovernment opposition. Mrs. Gandhi has remained a major force in the Congress Party.

Mrs. Gandhi said the allegations reflected the intention of some leaders of the ruling Janata Party to indulge in "character assassination." She noted that during the campaign she apologized to any victims of government excesses during the emergency.

"I have always stood with the people in every kind of difficulty and my heart goes out to those who have suffered in any way," she said.

Carter's support ups no-fault auto insurance drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Carter administration endorsement Friday strengthened the possibility that Congress will approve nationwide no-fault automobile insurance after a decade of considering it.

"It is time now to enact no-fault," Transportation Secretary Brock Adams told the Senate Commerce Committee. It was the first endorsement by an administration since the initial congressional hearings were held on no-fault in 1967.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and author of the no-fault bill, said the administration backing would help push the measure through Congress after years of narrow defeats.

Adams said consumers under the present auto liability insurance system get back only 44 cents in benefits for each dollar in premiums.

This figure surprised Magnuson, who has been holding hearings on no-fault for a decade.

"In the past, I have been saying that if you pay a dollar for insurance you can fight for 50 cents of that. Now I can change that to 44 cents."

"There is something very wrong in such a system," Magnuson said.

ADAMS TOLD THE panel that the 44-cents-per-dollar recovery rate was based on 46,000 fatalities and almost five million injuries in automobile accidents during 1975.

"We must correct the inequities and inefficiencies that have been so prevalent," Adams said.

Under no-fault, already adopted in some form by 16 states, persons are compensated for injuries in car accidents by their own insurance companies regardless of who is to blame for the accident. Under the traditional liability system, insurance companies must determine through lawsuits which driver was at fault and therefore which insurance company must compensate victims.

Adams said the 44 percent figure compares to 70 to 90 percent for such other insurance as private health insurance, workmen's compensation and Social Security.

"As a matter of national conscience, we must turn next to aid the automobile accident victims. We must see that they get prompt and fair compensation for losses resulting from injury or death without the need to decide who is to blame for the tragedy," Adams said.

Magnuson's bill would require each state that has not already done so to replace a liability insurance system that relies on proving fault with a no-fault system. It also would establish federal minimum standards for state no-fault systems.

Under the Magnuson bill, no-fault policies would have to reimburse the purchaser for the first $100,000 of his or her own medical and rehabilitation costs, up to $12,000 in lost wages, and for the cost of obtaining a housekeeper or other home aid care.

Glasses-to-go have now gone

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — McDonald's hamburger chain announced Friday it is suspending indefinitely its "Glasses to Go" program due to the confusion over whether the glasses pose a health hazard.

McDonald's president Edward H. Schmitt said all the chain's outlets were being asked to suspend distribution of the glasses, a promotional campaign started last year.

EARLIER in Washington, three federal agencies issued a joint statement saying parents should closely supervise children's use of the glasses decorated with lead-containing glazes until a federal task force determines whether there is any danger.

McDonald's suspended distribution of the glasses decorated with cartoon characters last Saturday after tests conducted by the Massachusetts Health Department determined that the decals painted on the outside of the glasses showed a lead content of up to 18 times the federal tolerance.

But McDonald's disputed the Massachusetts test results and resumed the sale and giveaway of the glasses earlier this week in a number of states, though not in Massachusetts, after the federal Food and Drug Administration said it found no evidence that lead from the outside seeped into liquid inside the glasses.

McDonald's and the glass manufacturers then sued Massachusetts Public Health Commissioner

Jonathan F. Fielding and his department, asking for a court order requiring retesting of the disputed glasses.

"Although the Food and Drug Administration has found no evidence of health hazard associated with the decorated glasses used in our promotion, and these findings are supported by glass industry and independent testing authorities, the FDA and the Environmental Protection Agency now urge care in the use of glasses by small children," Schmitt said.

"The children must come first," he said.

WHILE the report on tax forms called them "the greatest single burden imposed on the public by the federal government," another commission staff report says the growing federal paperwork burden — hard as it may seem for middle-income taxpayers, corporations and institutions like schools and colleges — is frequently hardest for citizens who are least able to deal with difficult-to-understand and often redundant requests for data about their lives.

Speculating that poor, elderly or ill-educated Americans sometimes never bother to apply for benefits because of the hassle of paperwork, and that landlords spurn federally-assisted tenants for the same reason, this report concludes:

"The sad but blunt fact is that no one really knows the full extent of federal paperwork burdens placed on individuals."

CITED as examples were the time and money spent by a family helping a son apply for a college grant or loan and a welfare mother's trip to city hall for a birth-certificate copy to satisfy a form.

Part of the problem, it suggests, is that "federal administrators are generally better educated and paid than the average assistance recipient" and may be "out of touch with the capabilities of the people they serve."

They walked down the stairs, despite his two artificial legs, he said. "At about the 15th floor, my wife smelled gas and panicked, but I told her to put something over her nose and keep going."

Edna Naaman of Indianapolis, Ind., on the 23rd floor, said she did not smell gas. She heard sirens, then the lights went out and the telephone went dead.

"I just got dressed and started walking down the stairway," she said.

A young man from Scranton, Pa., who didn't want his name used, said he heard someone yell on the 14th floor that a woman had fainted. He opened his window and left.

Carter backs down on voter sign-ups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing strong congressional opposition, the administration Friday watered down its plan to allow voters to register the day they go to the polls.

President Carter had made the plan a key part of his election-reform package. The proposal would have required states to allow same-day registration and faced strong Republican opposition.

But the administration decided to abandon that provision, leaving to the states the decision whether voters can register on election day.

States already have that authority.

Some Republicans characterized the administration switch as a defeat for the president.

But Richard Moe, an aide to Vice President Walter F. Mondale, said the change was not a defeat.

The decision, according to administration sources, came after Mondale and Carter aides were told by Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., that the original plan faced a strong fight in the House and a Republican filibuster in the Senate.

"We had to rely on the judgment of the people on the Hill," Moe said Friday night.

Minnesota and Wisconsin already have same-day registration.

Drug tests

through "extraordinary and extensive search efforts."

While saying the new material does not give a complete picture of the drug tests, Turner said it does provide additional details.

"In keeping with the president's commitment to disclose any errors of the intelligence community which are uncovered," Turner wrote, "I would like to volunteer to testify to your committee on the full details of this unfortunate series of events."

Turner said he must read and study "fairly voluminous material" before he will be prepared to testify. However, he said he would be in touch with Inouye next week "to discuss when hearings might be scheduled at the earliest opportunity."

Powell said he could not amplify on Turner's letter and had no knowledge of what the uncovered documents disclose beyond the summary by the CIA chief.

Turner wrote Inouye that he could give assurances the tests "were discontinued over 10 years ago and do not take place today." He said he has commended an unnamed CIA employee who found the documents.

Powell said Turner first learned of the discovery of documents Tuesday and informed Vice President Walter F. Mondale about it Thursday. The White House press secretary said Mondale told Carter the same day. Powell said Carter in turn directed Turner to contact Inouye and volunteer to testify.

Mondale met with Inouye on Friday shortly before Turner visited the senator, Powell said.

In response to a question, Powell said, "There was absolutely no connection" between the matter and the resignation this month of Deputy CIA Director Henry Knoche.

The details of several cases in which the CIA or Army allegedly administered drugs to persons without their knowledge already have come to light.

In one case, Dr. Frank R. Olson jumped to his death from a New York City hotel room in 1953 after being given LSD without his knowledge as part of a CIA drug experiment.

His death was described to his family as an unexplained suicide.

the next three weeks and told reporters he thought the problem was solved.

However, Flynt showed some irritation during a brief news conference earlier in the week by saying "if there is any confrontation, it is a unilateral action on his (Lacovara's) part."

An associate said Lacovara told Flynt in a telephone conversation Thursday that he regretted his memorandum had become public and produced a confrontation but that he felt his criticism had to be made.

Lacovara said in the memorandum that the scarcity of meetings hindered his getting approval of subpoenas and of getting an agreement with the Central Intelligence Agency for obtaining access to its documents.

The committee approved that agreement Wednesday.

At the same time several committee members expressed irritation at Lacovara's criticism.

Rep. Olin Teague, D-Tex., told reporters he was in a mood to fire Lacovara but he did not propose that to the committee.

Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn., complained that after suggesting the committee was slowing down the investigation, Lacovara had left for a three-week vacation in Europe.

Another Republican committee member, Rep. Bruce Caputo of New York, called Lacovara's resignation a "tremendous blow" to the investigation.

"I think his withdrawal from the investigation casts some real doubts on whether or not we will ever get to the bottom of the allegations in the Korean scandal," he said.

Rep. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., said he thought Lacovara's resignation "raises grave questions" on whether the investigation "can properly and effectively be conducted by Congress."

Maguire said he thinks the probe "has been crippled and no longer has the public confidence necessary to complete the job."

our area and regretted that, and regarding that appropriate measures will be taken to prevent any recurrence, I declare we are ready to deliver the survivor and bodies to your side proceeding from our humanitarian stand."

Observers said the moderate response of the North Koreans and the Chinese apparently was aimed at avoiding an angry confrontation that might play into the hands of American and South Korean opponents of President Carter's plan to withdraw 33,000 U.S. ground troops from South Korea over the next four to five years.

Carter said the CH47 Chinook helicopter apparently lost its navigational fix and mistakenly strayed into North Korean airspace.

The U.S. immediately sought return of the captured crewman, the bodies of the three others and the helicopter, but Carter said his "primary interest" was avoiding confrontation.

The Pentagon identified the three dead soldiers as CWO Joseph A. Miles, 26, of Washington, Ind.; Sgt. Robert C. Haynes, 29, of Anniston, Ala.; and Sgt. Ron Wells, 22, of El Paso, Tex.

South Korea made no official comment on the incident or the negotiating.

Hsinhua, China's news agency, reported that a "U.S. armed helicopter... infiltrated deep into the north side" of the demilitarized zone in violation of the military armistice agreement that ended the Korean war 24 years ago.

The U.S. had denied that the helicopter was armed and said its mission was to carry building supplies for a U.N. observation post on the south side of the buffer zone.

North Korea's officials news agency said when the helicopter was forced down on the North Korean side, Communist army units "repeatedly made a signal" that it remain in place and submit to investigation. It said the firing began again when these warnings were disregarded and the helicopter took off. The Korean Central News Agency twice called the incident "unhappy" and said it would not have occurred had the crewmen not attempt to flee.

North Korea also said the surviving crewman was receiving medical treatment from a unit of the North Korean army. In previous incidents, North Korea sometimes waited weeks before disclosing whether any of the Americans involved was alive.

Blackout's aftermath—Who, what went wrong?

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities began trying Friday to pinpoint reasons and responsibility for the blackout that crippled New York for more than 24 hours and cost millions in lost business and looting.

As businesses and public facilities returned to normal — or at least near-normal — officials and private citizens alike were asking four questions: What went wrong? Who's to blame? What was the cost? Can it happen again?

The Federal Power Commission formally opened its probe of the blackout that began Wednesday night when lightning struck a transformer and power lines. Similar probes have been announced by the city, the state and Consolidated Edison Co. itself.

Before the federal hearing started, Richard L. Dunham, FPC chairman, said the government must share the blame.

"Whatever we did obviously didn't prevent this situation," he said, referring to measures taken after the 1965 Northeast blackout. "Quite obviously something didn't fit. We're going to find out what went wrong and find out what steps can and must be taken to prevent the same thing from happening again.

"I'm satisfied that technology is available at least in the theoretical sense," he said, but added: "There's no way to give absolute guarantees this sort of thing won't occur."

After the meeting, however, Gov. Hugh L. Carey said: "I can guarantee that unless we have a holocaust... we can prevent blackouts — because that's what government is supposed to do."

Mayor Abraham D. Beame toured city areas hit by looting during the darkness.

"Everything's gone. Twenty thousand dollars. Not a drop left," one store owner in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn told Beame.

Some residents complained that police stood by and did nothing to stop the looters. Police Commissioner Michael Codd, on the tour with Beame, responded: "If each police officer went out and grabbed the first person he saw (looting), it would have meant that shortly there would have been no cops on the street at all."

Beame has accused Con Ed of "gross negligence," a charge denied by the utility, which already faces a $1-billion class-action damage suit in connection with the blackout.

Beame and other city officials said late Friday that the blackout cost the city government at least $10 million in employee overtime and revenue losses.

In addition, Deputy Mayor, Osborn Elliott, charged with economic development, said 400 businesses already have reported suffering $7 million in losses due to looting, fire and other blackout-related incidents.

The federal Small Business Administration declared the five boroughs of New York City and Westchester County a disaster area Friday, making businesses eligible for special loans.

At its height, the blackout disrupted life for 10 million persons in the five boroughs and parts of Westchester County to the north and Long Island to the East. Power was restored to the last of the 2.8 million affected Con Ed customers late Thursday night, 25 hours after the trouble began. The 1965 blackout lasted for 13 hours.

A state of emergency was lifted at 8 a.m. Trains and subways, which resumed limited service Thursday afternoon, carried workers through the Friday morning rush hour. Stores reopened. Food supplies spoiled in the heat were replenished. Court officials continued processing some 3,500 persons arrested for looting. People hurried, cars honked and streets filled as the city picked up its pace after a day of unnatural slowness.

units, including the Domestic Council.

"The basic thrust... is to strengthen Cabinet government," Carter said.

The plan will take effect in 60 days unless disapproved by either the Senate or House.

The president said the reorganization would make it easier for cabinet departments to contribute to domestic policy — a role that was diminished after former President Nixon created the Domestic Council as a counterpart to the National Security Council.

The plan is Carter's second move toward reorganization. Earlier this year, he proposed legislation combining energy-related responsibilities into a new Cabinet-level Energy Department.

Carter said he hoped Executive Office reorganization will serve as "a model that can be emulated as we move aggressively now to reorganize" the rest of the executive branch, an effort expected to be carried out during the next four years.

Sales of auto products help boost U.S. output

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by rising output of auto products and business equipment, production by the nation's industry increased seven-tenths of 1 percent in June, the sixth consecutive monthly advance, the government reported Friday.

The June gain in industrial output showed the nation's economy passed the halfway mark of 1977 still growing at a healthy pace. The June increase was considered particularly strong by some government economists since output had gained a full 1 percent in May and seven-tenths of 1 percent in April.

The Federal Reserve Board said that total output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities rose at a 12.5-percent annual rate during the three-month period, compared with a 5.3-percent rate of gain in the first three months of the year.

These economists have predicted the economy could not continue such a substantial rate of growth, which has caused the administration to predict there will be some slowdown in economic growth in the second half of the year.

The Federal Reserve Board said auto production increased 5.5 percent in June to an annual production rate of 9.7 million units.

People and ideas

The enemies of religion

From time to time the Religion Editor receives letters denouncing Christianity, Christian ideals and Christ. Such letters have a saddening effect.

The writers usually are not totally ignorant. They have dabbled a bit in history and may have even glanced at the Bible. Their rage is emotional, not realistic.

This is not to damn all unbelievers. Most of us have known cool, calm atheists. Many of them have never even thought about religion. They are concerned with the here-and-now. Often they are very efficient in their work. They are not concerned with ultimate concepts and ideals. They may have problems when the here-and-now becomes tragic, such as in bereavement. (But that's a problem for believers too.)

There is always a kind of flatness in the personality of the cool atheist. There is something missing in depth and perspective. Perhaps he has not received enough news. But he carries on, sometimes rather well.

The furious enemies of religion have a different problem. Why are they so angry at ideas which other people consider of prime importance?

One doesn't need to be a psychiatrist to understand these furious people, at least in part. They are not so much at war with formal religion as with their own lives.

Sometimes the rebellion has its brilliant explosions. The 19th century German philosopher, Friedrich Nietzsche, may be the most notable example. The son of a pastor, he hated Christianity with a mad passion. He hated many other things too. He was a poet, often quite insane, mostly sick and seldom happy. Nietzsche is not recommended reading for the emotionally unbalanced. A mature, educated Christian could gain something because some of Nietzsche's criticisms of Christianity as it is practiced are right on target.

The world has many little junior-grade Nietzsches who without the philosopher's learning and brilliance vent their venom. They, like Nietzsche, are their own worst enemies.

Why do they hate so violently? That is a question such persons should ask themselves. They may need some help in finding the answers.

MARK CLUTTER

themselves. They may need some help in finding the answers.

Another type of unbeliever is the agnostic. This is a more rational stance. The agnostic says, "I just don't know."

Now no one can know about ultimate things. Even the most faithful have had their moments of doubt.

The trouble with most agnostics is that they are so negative. There is a possibility of reverent agnosticism. A person can say, "I don't know, but the truth may be even more beautiful than anything I can imagine with my limited intellect."

The furious enemies of religion are remarkably naive. They lack sophistication. They are angry because the world is something less than perfect. They are especially angry because the people who call themselves servants of God are not perfect. This is certainly childish.

They fail to observe the rich fellowship, the caring for others, the calm courage to be found in religion.

And, of course, the laws, institutions and manners which give us some claim to civilization are rooted in religious concepts.

VACATIONS AND CHURCHES

Churches, like other businesses, have their seasons. The months of July and especially August are the slow times.

Many people, including clergy, are on vacations. Many who normally attend church go "blue-doming" instead. That is, they "worship" under the blue dome of heaven. They go off for weekends of fun.

Church attendance starts picking up after Attendance tends to taper off a bit until Lent. It grows steadily until Easter. Strangely the slump is small through the spring months after Easter.

Here is a suggestion for vacationers who regularly go to church: Go to church while on your travels. You can learn something by observing how services are handled in churches other than your own. And the people are so cordial to visitors.

Mennonites move to keep old ways

SEMINOLE, Tex. (AP) — The men toil in the fields, urging crops from the West Texas plain. The women dress plainly and wear no jewelry. The children do their lessons in a one-room ranch house school.

And these pioneers of 1977 speak German. The 600 Mennonites left homes in Mexico and Canada last fall and bought more than 7,500 acres in Texas near its border with New Mexico.

They weren't looking for a new life, said their bishop, Henry Reimer, rather a return to their traditional way of life.

"This is why we come to Texas," the leader of the Old Colony Mennonite Church said, "to get back to the old ways and to keep the kids on the farm and keep their German."

The Mennonites are Protestants, using a German version of the Bible. Mennonites began arriving in this country nearly 300 years ago, settling first in Pennsylvania and later in the Midwest. The larger Mennonite Church, with headquarters in Pennsylvania, lists about 100,000 members in this country.

Texas' new settlers said they hope to bring thousands more to the vast property.

In addition to crops, the colonists have begun a dairy herd and plan to build a cheese processing plant, machine shops and a furniture factory.

Seminole's mayor, Bob Clark, said the Mennonites are welcome. "They take care of themselves, control their children and they are work-oriented," he said. "And for that reason, I am glad they are here."

Dwayne Herman, president of a bank in Seminole, said, "The only negative comment I've heard is that they might not spend as much money here because they are self-sustaining."

The Mennonites have said they will pay local taxes, although they could claim a religious exemption for their church-owned land, until they build their own school system.

Bishop Reimer said he hopes Texas will provide the right atmosphere for the Mennonite children to "learn like we grew up."

Salvation Army goal: leading the hungry man to heaven

LONDON (AP) — "What good is it, taking the man from the slum if the slum is not taken from the man?" asks the new general of the worldwide Salvation Army, who brings the traditional Salvationist emphasis on combined physical and spiritual welfare to his command.

On Tuesday, Arnold Brown will take over leadership of 25,000 full-time salaried officers and 2 million unpaid part-time soldiers and adherents in 82 countries from Antigua to Zambia. In the United States, Brown claims, the Army is the fastest-growing Christian denomination.

The Army, founded by William Booth as the Christian Revival Association in the slums of London's East End in 1865, still pursues the mixture of street-corner evangelism and soup-kitchen social welfare that has created its popular image of good people doing good.

IN AN interview with The Associated Press in his office overlooking the Thames River on Friday, Brown said the Army feels it must look to man's bodily needs before it can tend to his spirit.

"William Booth discovered that a man who was cold and hungry was not interested in heaven," Brown said. "Booth found he had to care for the body to get to the soul of the man."

Atheism still Reds' 'state religion,' cardinal warns

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Eastern Europe's Communist regimes continue to oppose religious faith and still consider atheism their "state religion" despite apparent softening of those positions, Austria's Franz Cardinal Koenig said in a radio interview Friday.

The Roman Catholic cardinal warned against acceptance of what he termed Communist propaganda implying that attitudes toward religion are "normal and harmless" in the Soviet satellite nations.

Marxist doctrine calls for a withering away of traditional religions. Eastern Europe's Communist countries often control appointments to religious office and may restrict religious education and practice.

Cardinal Koenig heads the Vatican's secretariat for nonbelievers, which studies social and political causes of atheism.

He said East European Communist leaders seek to reap propaganda benefits by visiting the Vatican. Hungarian Communist Party leader Janos Kadar was received privately by Pope Paul VI on June 9 in what Koenig called "a spectacular event."

Yugoslav President Tito, who also heads the Communist Party in that country, is the only other East European party chief to have been received by the Pope.

Cardinal Koenig said it remained to be seen whether Kadar's visit would help improve the lot of Hungarian believers who, the cardinal said, are being edu-

Brown said the Army is growing most rapidly in Third World countries, where its black-and-red uniforms, singing, drums and platform for the individual to say his piece still have great appeal.

BUT HE cited statistics in the latest yearbook of American and Canadian churches to support his statement that "we are the fastest growing denomination in the United States."

"People join us because the Army serves as well as worships—our hospitals, dispensaries and schools show we are not just a frothy faith," he said.

Brown said the Salvation Army owns 20,000 buildings worldwide, but said those holdings are not profitable.

"It is always a struggle to pay off capital indebtedness and keep everything going. The Army seeks nothing for itself."

The 1977 church yearbook, issued by the National Council of Churches, said the Salvation Army increased its U.S. membership in 1974-1975 by 5 percent, from 366,471 to 384,817.

That contrasted "with the relative nongrowth in overall church membership across the country in the same period," the yearbook said.

The Army's quasimilitary character, which Brown said has been softened recently through increased consultation with second-level leaders, is underscored by the organization's motto: "Blood and Fire." The motto first appeared in the Army's crest in 1879.

The blood is that of Jesus, shed when he sacrificed himself "for man, as related in the New Testament. The Army holds that Christ's blood cleanses men of sin if they ask forgiveness. The fire is that of the Holy Spirit which, according to the New Testament, appeared over the heads of the apostles at Pentecost after Jesus' death.

Rites held for two hit by train

Associated Press

About 200 friends and family members gathered somberly Friday to say farewell to two girls killed when they walked into the path of a freight train last week.

The mourners filled a mortuary in Bell to pay respects to Julia Klein, 10, and her 8-year-old sister, Holly, both of Cudahy.

Services for two other children killed in the accident, 7-year-old Amanda Lack and her 6-year-old brother, Jason, also of Cudahy, were held in Cypress July 8. Their bodies were flown to Arkansas for burial.

The four children were hit by a Union Pacific train while walking along the tracks in Huntington Park July 7. Three of the youngsters died instantly, and Holly Klein succumbed in a hospital Monday.

Authorities have not determined why the children, who were walking head down towards the train, failed to heed the train horn and warnings of the engineer and brakeman.

The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating, and its report is due in about a month.

Priest's wife is ordained

CAMPBELL. — The Rev. Lois Pinneo was ordained a priest in the Episcopal Church in recent ceremonies held at St. Lawrence the Martyr Episcopal Church.

Galeta Lois Pinneo is married to an Episcopal priest, the Rev. Kent Pinneo.

She and her husband became the first known husband and wife priest team to say Mass together when they joined Bishop C. Edward Crowther in a consecrated Mass following the ordination.

Rev. Pinneo is one of 30 women ordained to the priesthood in the Episcopal Church since the church's general convention agreed to begin ordaining women in January.

She will serve as an assistant pastor at St. Lawrence Church.

Review Look for Possibilities

REACH OUT FOR NEW LIFE, Robert H. Schuller, Hawthorne, $7.95.

A continuing theme of Dr. Schuller, pastor of the mammoth Garden Grove Community Church, is "possibility thinking."

You don't think about your staggering problems, your inadequate personality, your failures, your unfortunate childhood. Rather, you think of what can be done, of "possibilities."

I am always wary of inspirational books. So many of them say naively, "Be good and you will be happy." Dr. Schuller's book is not like this. He recommends a tough attitude toward life.

I praise this book, not because it is a great book but because it has something important to say to people, especially Christians.

Dr. Schuller's life is an amazing example of his "possibility thinking." At the age of 28 he arrived in Orange County with $500 and a wife, his congregation of one.

He bought an organ for $300 and held a service with a "congregation" of 12 in a drive-in theater. Did this stop the young couple? Certainly not. They rang doorbells. Gradually their congregation grew.

The present church on 22 acres was designed by the late Richard Neutra, a distinguished architect. The cost was $4.5 million. It has a 14-story building and a 90-foot cross.

But this is just a beginning. There will be the majestic "Crystal Cathedral" very soon.

The church is a "supermarket" of religion. Do you need spiritual guidance? It is there. Do you need a better social life? It is there. Do you want to play basketball? It is there. Almost everything people need is there.

And there is the TV Hour of Power viewed by millions.

This busy man has found time to write ten books in 20 years in addition to preaching his sermons and directing the administration of a religion supermarket with a large corps of assistant ministers, lay personnel and office workers.

How does one possibility thinker do all this? Well, one of his secrets is being a hermit. For two days each week he disappears to a beachfront apartment. Only his wife and secretary have the number, and they are told not to call except in extreme urgency. He relaxes, reads, writes and plans for the next week. Maybe he is trying to tell all of us something.

Renewal

Dr. A. George Downing, executive secretary of the American Baptist Churches of the Pacific Southwest, will bring the message Sunday, 11 a.m., at Garfield Baptist Church, 23rd Street and Caspian Avenue. The church, which at one time seemed to be failing, is celebrating its "rebirth and renewal." A reception will be held following the service.

Deacon knows his convicts

By Edgar Williams
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

PHILADELPHIA-On a recent Sunday morning, Vaughan Booker, a deacon of the Episcopal Church and candidate for the priesthood, delivered the sermon at the Protestant service at Graterford State Correctional Institution.

After the service, a new inmate asked Booker if he would discuss a problem with him. Booker nodded, and the two moved to a quiet corner of the chapel.

"It's like this, Rev., the new inmate began. Then he shook his head. 'Aw, you just wouldn't understand. You don't know what it's like to be a con,' he said.

I think I do," Booker replied. He lifted his clerical robe, revealing his prison uniform.

Booker, 34, a Philadelphian, is serving 15 years to life at Graterford, commuted from the original sentence of life in prison for the 1967 murder of his wife. However, by the time he is eligible for parole in 1982, Booker could be an ordained priest.

"I feel very good about Vaughan," said the Rt. Rev. Lyman C. Ogilby, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania, who was the principal celebrant two years ago at Booker's ordination as a deacon. "He is a real example of how a person can make a complete turnaround through God's grace."

One afternoon recently, Booker sat in the chaplain's office at Graterford, where he counsels fellow inmates, and talked with quiet candor about his life - past and present. A handsome man, six feet tall and 170 pounds, he is amiable and articulate and extremely intelligent. On the strength of a 3.92 academic average (4.00 is straight-A) earned as an extension student in courses given by Villanova University at Graterford, he was elected recently to Alpha Sigma Lambda, a national honor society for students in continuing education programs.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Improving personality

Ever rated your personality? Ever sat down and tried to get an objective view of it? It's not all that easy to do. Having tried it myself, I cannot pretend it is a pleasant experience, either. But it is worth the effort.

After all, much of what happens in your life experience is determined by the quality of your personality. We are using the term in a superficial sense, denoting merely the social graces. Your personality is your total impact, the total effect you have on others and on your life. Indeed it is you completely. And it is possible to improve it.

A lot of people have serious personality trouble. Some admit it, some do not. If you are one of these and are not aware of it, that is likely to cause you trouble for it then limits your effectiveness and happiness without your even knowing that the limiting factor is within you.

There is a man I know who was always a capable fellow, but for years he was the victim of personality defects. He was overly tense, in a way that made everyone around him tense. He was a perfectionist, one who insisted everything be done exactly so. When he came into his office, the people working for him instinctively tensed up.

At home he was even more demanding. In the office he at least tried to be polite, but at home he could be himself—so he thought. Though he sincerely loved his wife, he wasn't even courteous to her. Without realizing it, he made her the shock absorber of his irritations. If something wasn't done just right, he would hit the ceiling. And from what I heard he circulated around the ceiling much of the time. He would swear and shout. He would pick up anything that wasn't nailed down and throw it. Then he would slump into a depression and remain in it for hours or even days.

Year after year the wife patiently put up with this behavior. She was a long suffering soul who stuck it out. And she loved her husband. She prayed for strength to endure his outbursts and she got it. But gradually the unremitting tension began to get to her. She lost her happiness and spontaneity. She began feeling prematurely old.

Then one fine evening the worn turned, as the saying goes. The man had gone into one of his tirades when suddenly his heretofore docile wife turned on him in flashing fury. With eyes blazing, walking the floor as she talked, she began pouring out to him the unvarnished facts of what his personality looked like to her. When he tried to interject a protest, she snapped, "Keep still and listen! It's my turn to talk and believe me you are going to hear something that has been coming to you for a long time."

As he sat helplessly taking in the devastating picture of himself she was drawing for him, the man had a very strange experience. His wife's voice seemed to fade. Then it was as though he was alone, looking upon a slowly moving stream. Somehow he knew it was his personality he was seeing into. In mid-stream was a large, dark, hard object, ponderously bobbing up and down. This he recognized as a composite of trouble-factors deep within him — guilt, hate, false pride.

The vision passed, and there again was his wife, still talking to him. All at once he felt very tender toward her and sorry for all the bad times he had given her. Apparently perceiving that something had happened to him, she looked at him strangely, stopped speaking and sank into a chair, exhausted.

He knew that that he would have to change. He was afraid if he didn't do something about it quickly, he might lose the vision and continue as he had been. The thought came to him that he had better get help. And that brought him to our Institutes for Religion.

No dramatic transformation instantly occurred. But this man kept his new insight. He began to achieve significant improvement. Gradually that hard lump at the heart of his personality broke up. And his wife, with a look of wonder in her eyes, now says, "My husband is so different."

'Un-Christian'

This is in response to your "Let's Watch Our Language." As a Christian, an elder in the United Presbyterian Church, and a student planning to enter the full-time ministry, I could not keep quiet. Because an evangelist lists Mormon, Christian Scientist, and Jehovah's Witnesses faiths under the label non-Christian cults, it is assumed he has his semantics wrong.

But most, if not all, born-again Christians would back up such a stand. From a theological standpoint, anything that denies either the Trinity (One God in Three Persons of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit) or the Blood Atonement (wherein the fully divine and fully human Jesus Christ took all the sins of the world upon Himself to please God's wrath) is not considered Christian.

Mormons, Christian Scientists, and Jehovah's Witnesses deny both doctrines. Mormon and Jehovah's Witnesses doctrine do not embrace monotheism let alone Christian theology. Christian Scientist thought does not believe in the existence of sin and death.

As a result, mainstream Christianity always has viewed these three as heresies outside the Christian faith and Church even in their beginnings. True, these religions mention Christ. After all, in Islam, the Koran mentions Jesus. Yet we certainly would not call Muslims Christians. So let us not water down the word Christian. To be a Christian means more than mentioning Christ and being religious.

Also the word Christian has been made too broad in its use by some people to mean simply being decent such as someone saying, "That is a Christian act." After all, all religions are striving to be good. Rather, Christianity is more than ethics. It is proclaiming that instead of man reaching for God, God has reached down to man in Jesus Christ.

Just because some religions use Christian terminology, it does not mean they necessarily embrace the major doctrines of the Bible. Within Christianity, a difference on minor beliefs and styles of worship exist. But the unity of one faith in one Savior and the clear major themes of the Bible are never to be discarded.

Unfortunately, the groups have placed themselves through their official beliefs outside of Christianity by their own choice. So I think you owe an apology to the evangelist Ronald Carlson. He simply called a spade a spade.

Anti-religion

The 1st Amendment guarantees freedom of religion, but an even greater need is freedom FROM religion. Supposedly, this freedom is implied in the inter-diction against "an establishment of religion"; however, it should be so explicit that even a clergyman can understand it.

When I enlisted in the army, I told the recruiting people that I was a nullifidian, and they said they didn't mind one bit. Yet for the past twenty years, draft-dodging theologians have accused me in various public places and asked if I've been "saved". The intimation being that all non-Christian... are dross. When you turn in your carbine and don civilian clothes, you automatically become dross. That's really an ingenious setup, isn't it? It's surprising that more of these slandering, pretentious quacksalvers haven't been justifiably pummeled. One thing to be said in favor of Jewish people and atheists, is that they don't try to "convert" (and take money from) anyone within sight, in broad sunlight, on public sidewalks and in public parks.

The Saturday editions of the Independent Press-Telegram usually contain a lot of articles about christian bunkum. I wish you would ask the flaming writers of these tales, what makes them think that they're superior to non-Christians. They should remember that Christians are in the minority on this planet, and will remain so until the cult fittingly dies out. This world needs decency, not senseless rituals and witless dogma. And decent people don't need a con man to explain the difference between wrong and right.

Hundreds of years ago, society should have acknowledged the fact that Christ was an ordinary man who correctly reasoned that the religion racket was more lucrative than carpentry. Think of all the crimes that have been committed in his name, in the last two thousand years. As Samuel Butler wrote, "Christ was only crucified once, and for a few hours. Think of the hundreds of thousands whom Christ has been crucifying in a quiet way ever since". If there actually was a supreme being, she'd surely be fed up with christian hypocrisy.

I didn't capitalize the word "christian", because it doesn't merit being capitalized.

Steven Pike
Long Beach

Editor's note: For some reason there have been a number of letters in the last several days expressing the most fierce opposition against religion and especially Christianity. This one is typical. Readers are invited to comment. See the remarks in the People and Ideas column.

Deprogramming

"How to Rescue your Child from a Cult" is one of the most shocking articles I have ever read. These women have described a clear cut case of kidnapping and false imprisonment. This is America. People are not permitted to detain and interrogate others regarding their religious beliefs in this country—not for any reason. This young man was handcuffed, his mouth taped shut. He was thrown into a car against his will and imprisoned in a motel room until he renounced his religious beliefs. These actions are crimes.

The article also describes a clear cut case of conspiracy on the part of the "loosely-organized anti-cult parent groups" who not only conspired to have others commit a crime, but also helped them hire the criminals. People who perpetrate crimes which are later committed are also guilty and should be prosecuted.

Belief in God is not a crime; joining a church or any other group is not a crime. Also, reevaluating your beliefs is not a crime. If someone wants to leave the Unification Church or any other church, they should take responsibility for that decision and do so. If anyone ever told me to lie, or if I felt I was being deceived, or if my list of reasons for why I should leave the church was longer than my list of reasons why I should stay, I would leave and no amount of peer pressure could stop me!

And what about deprogramming? Let the leaders speak for themselves:

Prof. Richard Rubenstein, noted Jewish theologian: "Deprogramming is the American reaction to dissonance just as torture and psychiatric confinement (are the reaction) in totalitarian countries."

Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen: "Deprogramming is brainwashing, often done for huge profit and so sinister and violent as to overshadow any of the brainwashing charges leveled against the cults."

Billy Graham: "It is dangerous to tamper with the minds, hearts and souls of religious people, and deprogrammers doing it for the rich financial rewards are tampering with everyone's religious liberty."

And finally, Richard Cohen of the Washington Post, "I for one, don't care if Trimbale (a deprogramming victim) is still a Moonie or not. He was always a citizen."

After all is said and done about "those Moonies," those Moonies are citizens and their rights should not be tampered with because, as Rev. Graham says, it is tampering with the rights of everyone. If you can hire someone to change someone's religion and get away with it, you can just as easily hire someone to change their politics, or their lifestyle, or their choice of anything.

Who is Christian

No doubt by now you have already received numerous letters concerning your comments in last Saturday's column ... "Let's watch our language."

Without trying to say more than is necessary, I would simply like to make a couple of observations.

(1) What is a Christian? Remember, it wasn't the early believers that called themselves by that name. It was their enemies. Why did they use that name? Because the early Christians had some very specific beliefs concerning the person of Jesus Christ, which motivated them to a totally different life style than those around them. For example, they believed that:

- Jesus was God come in the flesh (John 1:1,14)
- there is salvation in no one else (Acts 4:12)
- Christians could know they were going to heaven before they died (1 John 5:10-13)

• salvation is by faith in Jesus Christ, NOT works (Eph. 2:8,9)

By the way, the next time you talk to a Mormon, or Christian Scientist, or Jehovah's Witness, ask them if they believe these things. And if they say "yes," ask them to define their terms.

(2) Non-Christian cults all have a central characteristic ... they all claim to have received a new "revelation" from God, which adds new light to the interpretation of scripture, and which invariably takes precedence over the Bible. For example:

Mormonism has its Book of Mormon, Doctrines and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price.

Jehovah's Witnesses has its New World Translation, and the writings of Charles T. Russell.

Christian Science has

Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures.

While each cult claims to accept the Bible as revealed truth, when it comes to a contradiction between their "new revelation" and the Bible, they will always side with their "revelation." This, despite the fact that the Bible clearly affirms that God is unchangeable and immutable, and that God is always consistent in truth and revelation.

Here then are just two reasons why one would refer to certain cults as "non-Christian." There are of course many others. But to say, or argue, that because Baptists and Lutherans don't agree on Baptism is the same as Mormons and traditional Christianity not agreeing on the person and work of Jesus Christ, is ridiculous.

Carl R. Johnson
Cerritos

'The cults'

How can it be wrong to call the "cults" non-Christian when they teach things so different from those of the Christian Church? There is one thing only that makes a person a Christian: He knows that Jesus Christ is True God. One in Substance with the Father and the Holy Spirit, the Second Person of the Holy Trinity. This is the truth revealed by the Bible and the Creeds of the Church through the ages.

One is not a Christian because of his moral code, nor because of his beliefs concerning Baptism, evolution, social work, the end of the world, or even the Holy Eucharist (thus Orthodox, Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, etc. all qualify as Christian). But how can we call a Mormon a Christian when he considers Jesus one of three gods or one of Jehovah's supposed witnesses a Christian when he considers Jesus a creation of God anymore than a Buddhist who thinks Jesus was a great teacher? Surely just using Jesus' Name does not make one a Christian. Would we call a person an American who called America great but thought it should be part of communist Russia?

The term "non-Christian cults" is not so much hateful as just a truthful description of these people's beliefs.

Thanks

I just wanted to write a note to express my appreciation for your excellent reporting as the Religion Editor. I was particularly pleased with your June 11th reporting of the problems with crime and the treatment of such, which would be beneficial. You are to be commended for your forthright statements, also about various important issues such as the Civil Rights debate, etc.

We would be honored to have you come some Wednesday evening to our dinner and Prayer Meeting hour. We would be interested in expressing our appreciation to you for the excellent work you are doing and to have you bring greetings to our church. We have approximately 300 people who come for the dinner and the program which follows.

Terrible!

Thank you sincerely for putting in the pic of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church. Everyone loved it. Usually there aren't many in attendance at the 11 o'clock mass — but the church was filled Sunday.

Remember I told you Frank Kuhina was one celebrating his 92nd birthday Sunday. Mrs. Kuhina was there too (she's 84) and the party kept them away until about 10:15 a.m. When they got home, there were two young thugs in their house (off Alamitos, 1 block below PC Highway) and they beat them up. Terrible!

The unhappiest offense in football

...McCutcheon

...Saul

...Jackson

...Mack

...Young

By Rich Roberts
Staff Writer

Lawrence McCutcheon has added his complaint to the unhappiest offense in football.

Along with Rich Saul, Harold Jackson, Tom Mack and Charles Young, McCutcheon says, as matters now stand, he will not report when training camp opens at Cal State Fullerton next week.

Unlike Saul, Lawrence isn't asking to play with his brother, whose name is Larry.

Unlike Jackson, Mack and Young, he isn't seeking a voice in his destiny.

All he wants is more money. "A lot of running backs in the league are making more than I am," McCutcheon told the Independent Press-Telegram, "running backs that haven't done what I have done."

McCutcheon says he verified that opinion by comparing numbers with his NFL peers at the Pro Bowl and other meeting places.

How much does he think a man who has rushed for a thousand yards three times in the last four years—4,285 over-all—is worth?

"I think he should be making anything from $150,000 up," says McCutcheon, who is only 1,132 yards away from Dick Bass's Ram career record of 5,417 after gaining a club record 1,168 last season.

Bass needed 10 years to do it. McCutcheon has been in the league five seasons but has been a ball carrier only four.

The problem is that he has two years to go on a four-year contract, and the Rams have assumed the customary stance about renegotiating contracts.

McCutcheon thus places himself in a position similar to that of Chuck Foreman, the Minnesota Vikings' all-purpose running back who also says he won't show until his contract is re-written.

"They told me to wait until next year," McCutcheon says. "But in my position as a running back I can't depend on 'next year.' I may not even make it."

General manager Don Klosterman says, "I told him if he had only one year left on his contract, we'd talk about an extension—but he has two."

The Rams also claim to hold a reasonable line on salaries, even for superstars, striving to create the impression that all of their players are well paid and happy.

"There comes a point when you have to have some order on what you pay in salaries," Klosterman says.

But McCutcheon counters, "I think it's reached the point where management knows who deserves a raise."

"The Rams are considered to be a family and team players, but you also have to deal with individuals. Instead of distributing money evenly, they have to pay certain players what they're worth. You can't overlook statistics."

McCutcheon's comments are out of character. No prima donna, he is a low-key individual, popular among his teammates, who call him "Clutch," and he seldom has spoken out on controversial issues regarding the team or himself.

"I thought I'd never come to this," he says, "but I have to stand up for what I think is right—and I think I should be paid more money. I would like to think the Rams think enough of me to try to get this thing settled so I can get to training camp on time and get playing football in my mind. It's hard to put out 110 per cent when you're not getting what you believe you deserve."

Klosterman says, "We appreciate all the contributions Lawrence has made and hope he'll be in camp."

Players new to the club and others coming back from injuries will report Sunday night, but returning veterans such as McCutcheon aren't due until Friday night.

"Unless something happens before next Friday," McCutcheon says, "it doesn't look like I'll be reporting to camp."

Angels 5th place team—or worse?

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

General manager Harry Dalton fired a manager on Monday, claiming the Angels were good enough to contend for the American League West title.

Dalton ought to abdicate his dream world. The only thing the Angels are in contention for is fifth place in the A.L. West, and they had better start playing better or they won't finish that high.

The pre-season divisional favorites dug themselves a bit deeper grave at Anaheim Cemetery —

Angel of day

MIKE BARLOW pitched six shutout innings of relief.

oops, make that Stadium — Friday night, losing a 6-2 decision to the expansion Seattle Mariners.

That left the Angels with a 41-45 record, the first time they have been four games under .500 since May 16 when they were 16-20, and improving. Mired in fifth place, they are 11 games behind first place Chicago.

Worse than that, they have lost eight of their last 10 and are 2-3 under new manager Dave Garcia, having lost three in a row.

By virtue of its victory, Seattle, which has played eight more games than the Angels, now has only one less win than the Angels. The Mariners, tied for sixth with Oakland and 4½ games back of the Angels, have a 40-53 record.

The latest Angel victim was Gary Nolan, making his second start since being acquired by the Angels, and first start since being taken off the disabled list.

Nolan lasted two innings plus, giving up eight hits — both of Stanton's home runs — and all six runs. Stanton's three-run blow was the

Tabby-hitting Dodgers still in a tailspin

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — Alvin Dark, manager of the San Diego Padres, has been through the heat of the long, long summer so many times.

He was there as a player in 1951 when the Giants beat the Dodgers in the memorable "shot heard 'round the world," and he was there as a manager in 1962 when the Giants overcame the Dodgers again in a playoff for the pennant.

Friday night, before 31,726 San Diego Stadium fans, his pesky Padres unloaded on the Dodgers again, beating them 5-3 for the fourth successive time. The Dodgers' lead over Cincinnati is 7½ games, the closest the Reds have been since June 21.

It's the third loss in a row for the Dodgers' and their sixth defeat in their last seven starts, their longest dry spell of the season.

Dark figures the Dodgers will get rolling again, that it's just one of those slumps that hits every club, and that their pitching is so strong that they aren't going to be blown out of many games.

But asked flatly if the 7½-game advantage is enough, he leaned

Ball game no picnic for this crew

By Scott Ostler
Staff Writer

It was a late inning of a game at Dodger Stadium and the home club had the game well in hand. The fans were sitting back in their seats, savoring the imminent win, and a beer or two.

The beer fight probably began innocently, with a guy sitting on the front row of the second deck accidentally knocking his beer over onto the fans in the box seats below.

Wars have started over less. A wet gentleman on the lower deck retaliated by heaving his cup of beer up in the general direction of the fumble-fingered beer dropper on the second deck.

Within seconds the air was filled with flying foam. The upper-deckers, despite their obvious advantage, were getting no better than a draw. Hundreds of dollars worth of brew flew between decks as tempers boiled over.

When ammunition supplies dwindled and verbal abuse and threats began, a uniformed security officer moved down an aisle of the second deck to restore order.

Alas, a bottom-decker found one last unused beer. He hurled it up and it caught the officer square in the face. The officer kept his cool, wiped the suds off his face and uniform, and soon had the soggy situation under control.

KEEPING THE peace at Dodger Stadium requires a maximum of diplomacy and a minimum of force.

"Our main problem," says Denny Finerty, chief of Dodger Stadium's security operations for the last six years, "is when people mix too much enthusiasm with alcohol. But these people are still our customers. We'll try not to lay the heavy hand. We'll try to relocate 'em. We're mainly here to keep the peace and assist the public."

The job entails more than breaking up beer battles. The security men may also be called upon to handle such breaches of the peace as fights, vandalism, airplane dive-bomb attacks, fans running onto the field, purse snatching, gate-crashing, gang activity, loitering, liquor smuggling and marijuana smoking.

It's not all laughs.

"A few years ago," says Finerty, "a fan slugged one of our security officers and killed him. . . . The guy was put on probation."

The security office employs six full-time, year-round workers, including Finerty, and up to 55 officers per event, depending on the anticipated size of the crowd. The officers are part-timers, all male, hired through a union. They earn from $5 to $5.60 per hour.

Finerty thumbs through the log book of arrests for a recent Dodger home stand.

"No arrests on June 14 or 15. On June 16, we booked one drunk. Some fans got into a fight, a guy got hit over the head pretty bad. We filed a battery report. The guy got away. . . . No arrests on the 17th. . . . On the 18th, a guy tried to run over a security officer in the parking lot. We booked him ADW (assault with deadly weapon). He was a psycho from the veteran's hospital."

"On the 20th a guy went on the field and was arrested. If they interfere with a game, we book 'em on a 602-J (annoying Vin Scully)."

"Last night we had a 650½. A guy lit a banner (pennant) on fire and ran through the crowd."

"We've had three ADW's in the last two weeks."

THE STRANGEST INCIDENT ever, relates Finerty, was a few years ago when a pilot in a small plane buzzed the stadium three or four times. On one pass he dumped a sackful of bottles onto the crowd, and then he tossed out a five-pound sack of flour that nearly hit Maury Wills at shortstop. Nobody was injured, and the pilot was busted.

Blount sues his coach: $5 million

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — All-pro cornerback Mel Blount of the Pittsburgh Steelers said Friday he will sue his coach, Chuck Noll, for $5 million and will never play for Noll again.

Blount was furious over Noll's testimony in San Francisco this week that Blount could occasionally fit into a "criminal element" of National Football League players who are excessively rough.

The testimony came in a $2 million slander suit filed by George Atkinson of the Oakland Raiders against Noll. Atkinson sued after Noll accused Atkinson of trying to maim Steeler receiver Lynn Swann in a game last September.

Blount said he and Noll had always gotten along well, and that he was mystified by the coach's testimony. Noll charged that a defense lawyer had "coerced" Blount's name out of him.

In response to questions about a play in a game last year in which Blount hammered Raider receiver Cliff Branch, Noll testified that it was "an act we do not tolerate" and admitted it would make Blount part of an NFL "criminal element."

In a written statement Friday, Blount denied he had ever "attempted to injure any football player. I play the game of football with vigor, but with a true sportsman's integrity."

Blount said he would file a damage suit against Noll next week in U.S. District Court in New Orleans. Blount, a former Southern University star, lives at nearby Slidell.

His agent, Reg Foster of New Orleans, said Blount had suffered "manifold, irreparable damages" to his business interests, which include an employment agency and a quarterhorse farm.

Foster added Noll's statements could hurt Blount's football career, which they said was worth "in excess of $100,000 a year."

"How in the heck can you play for a coach who says you're part of a criminal element that goes around maiming people?" Foster asked. "This is grotesque."

Reds, Phillies keep heat on NL division leaders

Associated Press

Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies and George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds continued to batter National League pitchers and to keep their second-place clubs in the running Friday night.

Luzinski socked two home runs and drove in four runs as the Phillies swept a two-night doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs, 4-2 and 9-2. The wins pulled the Phils to within two games of the Eastern Division leading Cubs.

Foster, who has already crammed an excellent season into three months, hit his 25th homer with a man aboard as Cincinnati dumped Houston, 8-3, and picked up a game on the faltering Dodgers.

Foster, who slugged three home runs Thursday night, now has 90 runs batted in. The Reds made it two wins in a row after losing four consecutive games.

White Sox please 41,597, knock Bo Sox off A.L. perch

Associated Press

When Lamar Johnson was called upon to pinch hit for designated hitter Oscar Gamble in the fourth inning Friday night against the Red Sox, he wasn't especially concerned about his recent slump.

Johnson slugged a bases-loaded triple to cap a six-run rally and later singled in a run to lead the White Sox to a 9-7 victory before 41,597, the team's largest crowd of the season.

Boston's loss, coupled with Baltimore's 4-2 win over Milwaukee, knocked the Red Sox out of first place in the American League East.

"I wasn't worried about my slump," said Johnson. "Those things come and they go. All I was afraid of was striking out. That's the one thing you don't want to do in a spot like that."

Johnson's smash gave Wilbur Wood and the White Sox a 7-0 lead, but the Red Sox made a game of it. They scored twice in the sixth and added two more runs in the seventh to knock Wood out.

back in his chair, smiled and said, "No lead is safe until everyone else is eliminated. I know that sounds trite. But that's the way baseball is. Believe me, I know."

"I know this, too. I'd sure like to be where they are."

The Padres, who had dropped seven of their first nine meetings with the Dodgers, put the Lasorda gang away with a flock of kids—namely second baseman Mike Champion, who had three hits and drove home the tying and winning runs; shortstop Bill Almon, who had two hits, and third baseman Tucker Ashford, who doubled home San Diego's first run.

Veteran Rollie Fingers came to the rescue in the ninth inning, getting Boog Powell to hit a fly ball for the final out.

The Padres have won five games from the Dodgers this season and Fingers has figured in all five decisions, winning two and saving three others. But it's nothing new. In the 1974 World Series, when he was with Oakland, Fingers won one game from the Dodgers and saved two.

Over-all this season he's been involved in 26 of San Diego's 40 victories, with 20 saves and six wins.

Asked where the pads would be without the million dollar reliever, Dark just laughed and said, "I'd hate to think."

Dave Friesleben, Dan Spillner and Fingers restricted the tabby-hitting Dodgers to six hits.

more his fault than anyone else. We win together and lose together. He is not the only one having problems."

Garcia hopes the problems end tonight when Nolan Ryan takes his 12-8 record to the mound against anybody," said Garcia. "I don't feel there is a better pitcher in the league."

But then, before the season started, the oddsmakers didn't think there was a better team in the AL West than the Angels, and look what happened to them.

ANGEL ANGLES — Ryan goes after his 13th win for the Angels tonight against Seattle's Diego Segui (0-4). The Angels and Mariners close their series Sunday with Paul Hartzel (3-6) pitching against former Angel Gary Wrenchek (4-5). After that, the Angels take three days off for the All-Star break and then head to Minnesota for three games. . . The injuries continue to grow for the Angels. Centerfielder Gil Flores missed Friday's game with a sore arm. Rookie outfielder Bud Bosley and reserve infielder Orlando Ramirez are the latest additions to the 21-day disabled list. Bosley's right leg has a broken blood vessel. Ramirez's hand has been placed in a cast. He broke his left thumb sliding into third base at Minnesota a week ago. The Angels have recalled left-handed hitting Danny Briggs, who was on option at Indianapolis, where he had hit .276 in 25 games. . . The Angels have signed free agent Matt Clear, a left-handed pitcher from Cal State Dominguez, Clear, the son of Angel coach Bob Clear, has been as-

Johnny Bench and Mike Lum also drove in two Reds' runs, but probably the most encouraging sign for Cincinnati was the pitching of rookie Paul Moskau, who picked up his first major league win, allowing four hits before yielding in the seventh to Dale Murray. Moskau, a 23-year-old right-hander making his 11th start, entered the game with a 7.20 earned run average.

In Philadelphia, Luzinski's two-run homer in the sixth inning of the first game erased a 2-0 Cub lead, and Ted Sizemore singled home the winning run during a two-run seventh.

In the nightcap, Luzinski led off the sixth inning with his 21st homer of the season, equaling his entire 1976 production. It was his fifth homer in the last four games and sparked a game-breaking three-run inning.

Reliever Lerrin LaGrow got out of the seventh, but gave up a two-run homer to Carl Yastrzemski in the eighth.

LaGrow was on the ropes again in the ninth when Fred Lynn singled home a run, but he ended the game by getting Jim Rice on a called third strike to gain his 15th save.

The Texas Rangers swept a doubleheader from Cleveland, 8-3 and 8-1. In the opener, Juan Beniquez and Jim Sundberg batted in two runs each and Bert Blyleven (8-9) coasted to his third win of the season against Cleveland.

In the nightcap, Toby Harrah blasted a pair of two-run homers and Nelson Briles hurled four shutout innings of relief.

Kansas City powered past the Yankees, 7-4, Toronto beat Detroit, 8-6, Baltimore handled Milwaukee, 4-2.

Al Cowens and Frank White teamed up to bludgeon the Yankees. Cowens lashed three doubles, and White, swinging the hottest bat in the Royals' lineup, clubbed a three-run homer. The Royals have won eight of their last 10 home games.

Hrabosky may flee Rapp's trap

HRABOSKY
Mad

HRABOSKY
Madder

"When I was a kid," recalls St. Louis manager Vern Rapp, "my dad used to say the two cheapest commodities in the world were soap and water."

Can we get an "amen"?

Not from Al Hrabosky, once known as the Mad Hungarian, but now just another clean-cut Cardinal. Hrabosky has been very unhappy with Rapp's ruling that all Cardinals be clean-shaven and neatly barbered.

"It's one of the most traumatic years I've ever experienced," he said in an interview. "It's been total frustration. I really liked being the Mad Hungarian. . . . He was an extension of my personality. I felt like a schizophrenic. . . . Unintentionally, Vern Rapp is just kind of choking me. It's gotten to be a situation where I don't think I can play in St. Louis next year."

A St. Louis sportswriter said it was tough for the Cards to adjust from Red Schoendienst to Rapp. "The team was wandering around the country like a bunch of hippie mechanics, and finished 29 games out under Red in 1976. . . . Something had to be done."

Hunt wins pole for British Prix

James Hunt of Britain won the pole position Friday for the British Auto Grand Prix at Silverstone. John Watson of Northern Ireland will start the race alongside Hunt on the front row of the grid.

The current leader in the World Championship standings, Nicki Lauda, made the second row in his Ferrari, along with Jody Scheckter of South Africa.

Mario Andretti of America and Gunnar Nilsson of Sweden made up the third row.

Hunt was timed in 1:18.49 for an average speed of 131.48 mph.

Catfish latest Yankee malcontent

Catfish Hunter, New York's $3.5 million right-hander, joined the swelling ranks of Yankee malcontents Friday, knocking the team's new random pitching rotation.

"I don't think we have one (a regular rotation)," said Hunter. "I think you go from one day to the next not knowing who is going to pitch."

"At Oakland (Hunter's former team), we'd know three weeks in advance who was going to pitch. Over here, you know one day ahead. That's it. You can't prepare yourself to pitch."

Hunter is 5-4 with a 5.32 earned run average.

From goalkeeping to embezzling

Michale Ivanow, former goalkeeper for the San Jose Earthquakes, was sentenced Friday to three years in federal prison for embezzling $70,317 from the Russian-American Credit Union in San Francisco.

Ivanow, current backup goalie for the Seattle Sounders, was ordered to begin the sentence Sept. 6. He pleaded guilty to embezzling the money through a dummy corporation when he was manager of a credit union in San Francisco.

He used the money to buy a house, car and for travel.

Atkinson's past enters into trial

George Atkinson's past brushes with the law entered into his $2 million slander suit against the Pittsburgh Steelers Friday. The defense sought to dispute the Raider cornerback's claim he had never had any damaging publicity until Steeler coach Chuck Noll labeled him as part of "the criminal element in the National Football League."

The defense noted that Atkinson pleaded guilty in 1973 to carrying a concealed weapon. The player explained the gun was used for protection in making deposits from his liquor business.

Also brought up was a federal indictment alleging grand theft and embezzlement, and alleged threats to a boyfriend of a bank teller. Atkinson said that he had been cleared of all charges.

BRIEFLY — Today's quiz: Which are the top four participation sports in the U.S., according to the Nielsen Rating Service? Answer: Bowling, tennis, table tennis and softball, in that order. Some 27.3 million people now play softball, the survey said. . . . New York City's power blackout forced a delay Friday in federal court action in the case of the New York Nets' bid to move to New Jersey. . . . Full financial disclosure would be required of 220 ski areas across the country that operate on lands leased from the federal government under a bill approved unanimously by the Senate.

Walker never ducked a punch, drink or woman

Knight News Service

MARLBORO, N.J. — It is a typical hospital room, sparsely furnished but functionally comfortable, and the man who occupies it is fighting his toughest battle. He is fighting for his life.

The room is located in the geriatric center of the Marlboro Psychiatric Hospital in Marlboro, N.J., and the occupant is accustomed to tough fights. He rarely had an easy one.

His name is Edward Patrick Walker, but he is better known as Mickey, the Toy Bulldog. In a boxing career that spanned 17 years, he fought in every division from featherweight to heavyweight and won titles in two of them.

His fights were one-man riots. Some fighters like to box, others like to slug, but Walker liked to brawl. He wanted total war and he thrived on punishment.

HE LIVED the way he fought. He drank hard, was married seven times and he boasted that between the end of World War I and the start of World War II he redistributed $4 million.

Most people in boxing classify Sugar Ray Robinson as "the best boxer who ever lived, pound for pound," because Robinson held both the welterweight and middleweight titles and if he hadn't become exhausted by the heat, he might have won the light-heavyweight from Joey Maxim.

Mickey Walker did all that and more. He also held both Robinson's titles and fought for the light-heavyweight title twice, losing to Tommy Loughran and Maxie Rosenbloom. But he beat Rosenbloom in a return bout after Maxie had lost his title. And Walker, who was only 5 feet 7 inches tall and never weighed more than 165 pounds, even moved into the heavyweight division.

"I HAVE TO agree," said Herman Taylor, the 91-year-old Philadelphia promoter who staged a number of Walker's bouts. "Robinson was the better boxer, but Mickey was a real prizefighter. He never took a step backward. A gamer human being I don't think ever lived."

Now the man they nicknamed The Toy Bulldog is battling two tough opponents at the same time — an advanced case of Parkinson's disease and cerebral arteriosclerosis. "Mickey is not in pain," said his brother, Joseph, a retired chairman of the New Jersey State Athletic Commission. "He does have lapses, but he does remember some of the past."

Walker, whose birthday is July 13, is 76 years old and was born in Elizabeth, N.J., and he fought his first professional bout there when he was 18. His purse was $10. Three years later he won the world welterthe light-heavyweight division, beating such outstanding contenders as Mike McTigue, a former champion, Malt Adgie, Paul Berlenbach and Tommy Milligan. In fact, both Kearns and Walker were so confident of Mickey's ability to beat Milligan that they bet their entire purse of $120,000 (getting 4-1 odds) that The Toy Bulldog could beat the Englishman in London.

Now the timetable called for Walker to move into the heavyweight division and the courageous little brawler began to chop down the giants.

He fought Leo Lomski three times and won all three. He fought John Risko three times, winning twice. He knocked out K.O. Chrisner in one round and beat Paolin Uzudun and King Levinsky. Then he spotted Bearcat Wright 90 pounds and beat him easily in 10 rounds.

It was 1931 and the next step was Jack Sharkey, who had lost the heavyweight title to Max Schmeling the year before. A victory would have projected Walker into a championship bout. Mickey had to sacrifice the middleweight title to get the bout but that didn't matter since he and Kearns were looking for greater achievement.

Walker fought Sharkey in Brooklyn's Ebbets Field and the crowd of 35,000 cheered loudly for Walker, who gave away 25 pounds and 5 inches in height. When it was over, the decision was a 10-round draw.

There was some disappointment over not win-weight title by beating Jack Britton, a classic boxer, in 15 rounds at the old Madison Square Garden.

One year later, his manager, Jack Bulger, died and Jack (Doc) Kearns stepped into the picture.

Kearns had managed Dempsey but a coolness had developed between them and the wily manager realized that Walker, despite his size, could become a fantastic source of income. Kearns understood the economics of boxing — the bigger the fighter, the bigger the purse.

Kearns made only one mistake in Walker's career and that came in 1926 when they lost the 147-pound title by fighting Pete Latzo in Latzo's hometown of Scranton, Pa. But a few months later Walker took away Tiger Flowers' middleweight title in Chicago. Later, Walker disclosed that Kearns had filled his water bottle with gin that was personally mixed by Al Capone.

But the middleweight title was only one short step up the ladder. Kearns had lost Dempsey and he yearned for another heavyweight champion.

Flying beer not only hazard for Dodger security force

The toughest regular assignment for a security officer is working the turnstiles before each game, looking for fans trying to sneak alcohol into the park. "You take a lot of abuse," says Finerty. "It takes a special type of person to handle it. Groups give you trouble — clubs, schools, even church groups. They get in a group and they're performing for each other."

Why can't fans bring their own? Reason one, the stadium sells beer. Try taking a six-pack into your favorite bar. Two, bottles and cans make swell missiles. Three, says Finerty, "If a guy brings in a five-gallon jug of wine, there's an inclination for drunkenness."

The Dodger Stadium officers handle the touchy turnstile inspection tactfully, checking jackets, packages, even purses. Most fans, even those caught with contraband booze, walk away smiling. When found, liquor containers are tagged and a claim check is given to the fan. Those who refuse to cooperate with the inspection are denied admission.

"If you explain it properly, there's hardly ever a problem," said security officer Ed Rasmussen as he checked the folks entering the leftfield bleachers before a recent game.

Rasmussen is a seven-year veteran of the bleachers, where the booze and rowdiness problem got out of hand two seasons ago.

PETE ROSE WAS THE unwitting catalyst. Bleacherites tossed bottles, fruit and whatever they could get their hands on at the surprised Cincy leftfielder.

The Dodger brass reacted by cutting off beer sales in the bleachers. The no-sale edict remains. And no fruit is allowed in the bleachers.

"It was getting bad out here," says Rasmussen. "I mean bad. Young groups would come in, throw stuff at each other, fight. The pavilions (Dodgerese for bleachers) are generally for children and families. Since we've stopped selling beer out here, the rowdy-type groups are gone and the children and families are back."

Stripped of bottles and cans and fruit, Dodger fans improvise.

"We used to have ice in big chunks in our soft drinks," says Finerty, shaking his head. "They'd throw it. So we went to crushed ice and they made snowballs out of it. Now we use small chunks. We used to wrap hog dogs in tin foil. They'd wad it up and throw it."

Long ago, the Dodgers rented seal cushions, which were excellent for skimming at the on-field ushers and officers after games.

Finerty walks past a turnstile guard, who shows him a bag confiscated minutes before. "Must weight 25 pounds," says the officer, hefting the shopping bag filled with large paper discs, enough confetti to inflict a dozen concussions if the discs do not separate when thrown.

The Dodger security men are not armed. No batons, no mace. Only handcuffs.

"We don't want weapons here," Finerty says. "If a guy rips off that souvenir stand there, what's he going to get? A hundred bucks and some bobble-head dolls. We shoot at him and we'd hit a dozen other people."

Undercover police men, usually about 10 of them, from the LAPD, work games. They look for general problems, including marijuana.

"Since the law (less severe marijuana penalties), people think they can sit in a crowd and smoke marijuana," says Finerty. "Not so. Dope smokers are asked to leave the park. If they protest, they are cited or booked by the LAPD."

Says one undercover cop. "If we could go through and confiscate it all, we'd have a couple of tons."

"A lot of fans don't like it (marijuana smoking by others)," says Finerty, "and they're not reluctant to report it."

So far there have been no complaints from smokers that their grass was ruined in a bear fight.

'Viva Knieval' sets downhill mark

By Desmond Ryan Knight-Ridder Service

"Viva Knieval" is a film that describes an artistic trajectory similar to one of Evel Knieval's more ill-advised motorcycle jumps. Its path is resolutely downward, its purpose dumb beyond measure and its consequence laughably catastrophic.

I AM NOT privy to Evel Knieval's thinking — to put a kind of face on the process — in embarking on this unwittingly hilarious movie. For whatever reason — overpowering exhaust fumes, a fractured pate, colossal ego — he decided to star in a picture about himself.

It is not autobiographical, merely autocrotic. For "Viva Knieval" is infused with worship of an image. Not only will it hear no evil and speak no evil about Knieval, it will not even address itself to the moderately interesting question of who he is and why he does what he does.

In this fictional tribute to his mad heroics, one is left with the conviction that Evel spends so much time sitting on a motor bike because he cannot stand up under the crushing weight of his machismo. Feminists watching his clumsy dalliance with Lauren Hutton will either rend the screen apart or retire in exasperation and hysteria.

"Are you a woman or a Ms.," asks Evel in an early meeting with Hutton. The film never rises above this level of intelligent exchange. The fiction in which scenarists Antonio Santillan and Norman Katkov (who are doubtless now hiding out in South America) have embroiled Knieval defies description, not to mention belief.

KNIEVEL, friend to little children — "You're the reason I'm walking," one sick child informs him — is used by drug smugglers who wish to kill him and use his red, white and blue truck to move contraband from Mexico. The performance of the name professionals in this film: range from awful (Hutton) to unforgivable (Gene Kelly).

Kelly, Knieval's mechanic, spends a lot of his time drinking. The reasons are probably (a) Evel telling him that "riding motorcycles is a serious business" (b) Red Buttons, as a promoter, extricates himself from the film's first.

Knieval roars around this film on motorbike and image. As with his jumps, the viewer is left befuddled by two questions: Why does he do it and why did I watch it? Neither of these questions is answered at the theaters where this film is now playing.

'The Wiz' returns for new enchanting tour

Denise Kusel
Staff Writer

"Kansas? You want to go where? Now, I can understand you wantin' to go to Brazil. Or Mozambique. Or maybe Compton. But, baby... Kansas? — dialog from 'The Wiz.'"

Currently in its second Los Angeles tour, "The Wiz" is easin' down that yellow brick road and gathering nightly standing ovations for a clever show that drips with energy, style and tongue-in-cheek hip.

The story of the L. Frank Baum classic, "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," emerges with a facelift fresh enough to smack even the most dour face back to life.

It's entertainment in every sense of the word. Dialog spins off the lips of the characters like precious stones.

When Charles Valentino, who bows as the Scarecrow, takes a quick glance at Tin Man (Ben Harney) he thumps his hand against the still rusty metal body and mumbles, "Man, I've seen some spaced-out garbage cans... but this one. Ooohhh."

Costuming by Geoffrey Holder (winner of two Tony awards as the director and costumer for "The Wiz") is exceptional. The ailing Tin Man is decked out in a trash can (without the lid) and kneecaps fashioned from beer cans.

Slide some oil to me
Let it slip down my spine
If you don't have STP
Crisco will be just fine
— Tin Man's song.

Holder is a jive turkey Tin Man who serves up the role with creative juice.

Review

Holder's voice, strong and willful, provided one of the most cohesive units in the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera's production currently at the Ahmanson Theater.

Renee Harris, who made her Broadway debut in "The Wiz," was outstanding as Dorothy.

Her spark and enthusiasm were infectious. With the announcement that Diana Ross will step into the silver slippers for the upcoming movie version of "The Wiz," I wonder if the supreme Ms. Ross will be hard-put to follow Renee's zip in a role that's tailor-made for the petite 18-year-old.

In addition to set design that made even the most barren of Kansas prairie look like Flint Hills in autumn, George Paison's high-steppin' choreography had the dreaded Funky Monkeys clinging to cross bars, while Addaperle (Vivian Bonnell as the Good Witch of the North) sashayed across stage with a sultry toss of her magic slate.

Production numbers like "Ease on Down the Road" and "Don't Nobody Bring Me No Bad News" brought standing ovations. Which brings us to The Wiz, himself.

Tall and cool, eyes hidden behind green shades, this dude struts around in six-inch platforms wearing a white-on-white outfit that would bring envy to any pimp's eyes. Kamal, as The Wiz, is the epitome of cool.

But underneath all the glam and glitter there beats a heart as green as Emerald City, of which he is honorary mayor and dreamkeeper.

The story's the same folks. As a 6-year-old boy a few seats away from me summed it up: "You wanna know what this is? Man, this is cool."

What next? Probably a black version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Anyone want to bet money on it?

Claude, 'King of Mountain Ballads'

By Joe Edwards

NASHVILLE (AP) — Get out your gun, Clifton Flowers. Claude King still wants your daughter.

For 15 years, King has been singing about the gun-toting Flowers and his pretty young daughter in the melodious ballad "Wolverton Mountain."

The mountain melodrama continues because a rejuvenated King has re-recorded and re-released the 1962 song that sold 3 million copies.

"The record was still selling and we felt it should be recut," the lanky King said after a recent recording session. "Johnny Cash recut 'Folsom Prison Blues' and it did better the second time."

"The arrangement is a little different," he said. "It's a modern, fresh sound. They did some things I liked with the drums and guitars. But we didn't change it so much that people will be offended."

"I wish I had a way of finding out all the people who have recorded it," said King, who lives in Shreveport, La. "Years ago, way over 100 had recorded it. My great-grandchildren will get checks from it. It's a standard like 'Stardust.'"

The song stayed on the charts for a year and was No. 1 for months in Japan, Sweden, Denmark, South Africa and Germany.

"The song meant everything to me," King reflected. "Who knows what might have happened to me. It opened up avenues."

"When I do a show, the people usually start yellin' for it. I usually do it twice. I do it and get it out of the way, then repeat it later."

King, 44, just began recording again after a two-year hiatus. He's on a lesser-known label now after 14 years with a major company.

"I've never had this much ambition and enthusiasm," he said. "I have a fresh outlook on everything. It's like a guy taking a vacation. You get back and you've got the enthusiasm. That's the way to describe myself."

"You can get lost in the shuffle on a big label, but here you feel like you belong, like you're wanted."

There will be no major changes in his style. "I've always been partial to ballads and good story songs. It's what I really like. I guess it's because I was raised in the country and country people had a hard life. These songs relate to people and say it pretty well."

King, who once drove Hank Williams' touring bus, has just released an album of his greatest hits.

Besides "Wolverton Mountain," they include "All For The Love of a Girl," "Sam Hill," "Laura (What's He Got That I Ain't Got)," "Mary's Vineyard," "Tiger Woman," "Little Buddy," "Chip 'N Dale's Place," "Big River, Big Man" and "The Comancheros."

"I still have one ambition," King said. "I've always wanted to do an album of sacred songs."

ABC SIGNS JOHN WAYNE

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John Wayne, the 60-year-old star of movies dating back to 1929, has signed an exclusive two-year contract with the ABC Television network, ABC said Friday.

ABC declined to say how much Wayne will earn under the contract, which the network says starts with the 1977-78 television season.

The network said Wayne, whose most recent picture was "The Shootist," will "appear as himself in six major two-hour specials."

'Soap' publicity has ABC bubbling, but also worried; remakes planned

By Jay Sharbutt

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — ABC, both elated and worried about publicity over its sex-spiced "Soap" comedy, said Friday it'll remake parts of the first two episodes of the new series.

But network officials, announcing this from New York by closed-circuit television to 195 affiliate stations, didn't say why the change was ordered or if already-printed criticism of the show led to their decision.

The series, to premiere next September in a 9:30 p.m. time slot on Tuesdays, is about two suburban families and is described by ABC as an "outrageous character comedy soap opera."

The leadoff episodes touch comically on impotence, a homosexual youth considering a sex-change operation, a philandering husband and a young tennis bum having separate affairs with a married woman and her daughter.

In his speech to affiliates, Alfred Schneider, ABC's chief censor, discussed only one scene — involving the tennis bum and the two women — and didn't specify what was being changed in it.

He said only that because of the change the scene "is funnier."

ABC programs chief Fred Silverman conceded the network likes as much advance publicity and comment about a new series as possible, but said "matters seem to have gotten a bit out of hand."

"Never have so many words been written about a television pilot which so few people have actually seen," he said.

He didn't mention that ABC, after earlier screening the first two episodes for affiliates and some TV critics, now refuses to show them to other critics until the ordered scene changes are taped.

Silverman said some published reports about the series were "based on story lines and ideas never contemplated — much less approved — by ABC. Fragments of misinformation all too often have distorled our real intention. Much of this unfortunately has been fanned by a story in Newsweek and by self-serving comments of a competitor."

He disclosed neither the competitor nor the comments.

The Newsweek magazine story, published June 13, said, among other things, that "what 'Soap' primarily is selling is sex, and with a harder core than any sitcom has ever dared."

It also said one future plot outline has the promiscuous daughter of one family trying to seduce a Jesuit priest in church.

"Perhaps the most misleading reports of all had to do with the so-called 'seduction scene' in church," Silverman said, calling it totally untrue.

He said the outline actually concerns a promiscuous, extremely unhappy young woman who discovers that the priest hearing her confession in church is an old high school sweetheart.

Bellflower school board weighs cutback proposals

By Dorothy Korber
Staff Writer

Tight money conditions in the Bellflower Unified School District may result in the elimination of after-school sports, the closing of schools, or the sale of an 18-acre site valued at $1.2 million.

These were among the suggested cutbacks presented to the school board this week by three top administrators. A public hearing on the proposals is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday.

The administrators were directed to suggest ways for the board to cut at least $200,000 from the district's $18-million budget.

The budget does not include cost-of-living raises for employees and will have to be trimmed by another $100,000 for each percentage point salaries are increased. Bellflower teachers are seeking an 8 percent pay raise.

THE CUTBACKS are necessary because the district started the 1976-77 year with a $261,000 deficit. Meanwhile, declining enrollment continues to erode the amount of money Bellflower receives from the state each year.

Task force members James Tunney, Leroy Small, and Michael O'Bric polled other administrators, teachers, and classified employees for cutback possibilities. Their suggestions were incorporated into the report the team presented to the board.

The three-man task force was created by the board of education two months ago in a move which stripped Supt. Richard Guengerich of much of his authority. Board President Richard Vermillion said he initiated the action in an effort to improve the flow of communication in the district.

In the report, district principals proposed eliminating after-school sports that are not self-supporting. This would save about $66,000, according to the task force.

THE PRINCIPALS also suggested postponing replacement of old social studies texts, with a possible saving of $70,000. Another $200,000 could be saved by closing some schools, they said.

Business Services Administrator O'Bric said Friday no schools would be closed without careful analysis.

(One of the first actions of the new school board was to reverse the decision to close Betsy Ross and Will Rogers schools. The decision by the former board to close the schools was made because of declining enrollment. This resulted in a controversy in the community, and the current board reversed the decision.)

The principals feel the district could produce some income by selling surplus property such as the Lincoln School site valued at $200,000 or the 18-acre parcel north of Mayfair High School.

Bellflower classified employees agreed that the district should investigate selling these properties.

The employee group also proposed that Bellflower consider creating year-round schools. This could result in significant savings, according to O'Bric, because it would reduce the need for school facilities by 25 percent. Many school buildings stand unused for three months of the year, he pointed out.

All three groups suggested cuts in the district's administrative personnel. The teachers proposed that the superintendent be assigned the post of coordinator of special projects whose major role would be to bring grants and other outside money into the district.

THE TEACHERS felt that a major reorganization of central district administration could result in major savings.

The task force agreed and devised a new organizational chart which they say will save the district $133,000. The plan eliminates 12 positions and creates nine new ones.

A deputy superintendent would replace the district's two assistant superintendents. Two of the task force members currently fill the assistant superintendent posts.

O'Bric said such reorganization is not unusual in a district with declining enrollment.

"It's inevitable," he said. "We have to streamline the central administration. What we're after is not only an immediate cutback but a whole restructuring of the organization. This will result in future savings, as well."

One fundamental change in the district's organization would place the principals directly under the superintendent. Other administrators would report to the deputy superintendent.

Two vie for superintendent

Educator to seek court order in Compton school post fight

By Don Borst
Staff Writer

Dr. Georgia Williams, one of two educators who both claim to be the superintendent of the Compton Unified School District, is scheduled to seek a court order next Friday installing her alone in the post.

In his opening statement on the case Tuesday, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Charles Phillips did not rule out any of three possible solutions under consideration: installing Mrs. Williams as superintendent; installing her rival, Dr. Rodney S. Mahoney, or ordering them both to share the duties of the position.

Phillips granted Mrs. Williams and her attorney, Harold C. Hart-Nibbrig, a 10-day postponement for time to prepare their arguments.

Dr. Williams said she "fully expects" to be the superintendent when school begins in September, even though the district's Board of Trustees voted last week to confirm her termination.

Mahoney is officially serving as superintendent of the district, but Dr. Williams, formerly a superintendent intern with the Rockefeller Foundation, was hired as the superintendent-designate last Sept. 1, after a nationwide search for a successor to Mahoney.

The search began after Mahoney said he would retire at the end of his term, last June 30.

But Mahoney changed his mind in March when he received the support of the newly elected board and decided not to retire. The board promptly voted to retain him as superintendent.

After Phillips ruled that Dr. Williams' contract was valid, the district apparently had two superintendents on its hands.

Mahoney did not submit official notification of his retirement, and the law provides that unless he makes that official notification, the board must give him six months notice of termination.

Trustees who favor Dr. Williams, however, said they would not have spent several months searching for a replacement if they had not been told by Mahoney himself that he planned to retire.

Dr. Williams said she arrived at the superintendent's office July 1, expecting to begin her two-year term as the district's top official, but found that her key wouldn't unlock the door. Thus began a controversy which apparently will ultimately be settled in the courts.

"I don't intend to succumb to the board's action," she said. "I most certainly expect to become the official superintendent when the court proceedings are over — but until then, I'll continue to work in the community, talking with parents and civic leaders, so I will have a head start when I do get the office."

Mahoney hasn't worked in his office since July 1, however, and his secretary said Thursday she didn't know when he would return. He is reportedly on a vacation in Hawaii — where he spent two weeks last month on another vacation.

Deputy Supt. Aaron Wade said he did not expect Mahoney to return from his latest trip until "the last week in July or the first week in August."

"He never seems to be around while the issue is at hand," complained Dr. Williams. "And I don't think we'll see him much while the case is in court."

LAKEWOOD YOUTHS PLUG FOR BLUEGILLS AT EL DORADO PARK

Fishin's fine at Lakewood derby

By Kris Sherman
Staff Writer

Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn would have been proud of Danny O'Connor, Scott McGregor, Jeff Bricker and about 175 other Lakewood youths who wet their lines in the lake at El Dorado Park on a lazy summer's day Friday.

The youths, ranging in age from 8 to about 15, whooped and hollered as they felt the tug of bluegill or carp on their bamboo fishin' poles.

"I got one! I got one!" one ecstatic youth yelled as he pulled his line out of the water. Dangling at the end of the line was a four-inch bluegill, a fish not even big enough to bother warming up the frying pan.

But as far as the youngster was concerned, he could just as well have landed Moby Dick or some other giant sea creature.

"Boy, that fish really put up a good fight. I want to catch another one," the youth said, a big grin breaking across his freckled face.

Following an hour or so of fishing, the kids picnicked next to the lake in the best Tom Sawyer tradition.

Overflow at Plaza concert

The sounds of Doye O'Dell's western band kicked off the first in a series of 10 free outdoor concerts Friday afternoon as an overflow crowd turned out for "Music on the Plaza."

A European-style sidewalk cafe provided the atmosphere for about 400 people who gathered at the Long Beach Convention Center Plaza.

The large turnout wasn't expected, according to Doris Slovall, concert coordinator.

"We ran out of chairs and tables almost before the concert began at noon. Future planning will

Rags to riches for ex-POW

By Janice Perry
Staff Writer

David Rehmann, the former Vietnam prisoner of war for 6½ years whose picture symbolized for Americans the plight of POWs in Hanoi, has met his reward.

Not in heaven, but in the stock market.

In four short years, he has literally gone from prison rags to American riches, and, according to Rehmann, his net total worth approaches $1 million.

The blue-eyed, tousle-headed Rehmann, who has almost more money pots than fingers to put in them, said he began his climb to fortune investing in the stock market a year after his release.

The ex-POW, still a bachelor, now shares with his mother a fashionable condominium overlooking Mission Bay in San Diego.

Rehmann, 35, owns a seafood-processing plant in San Diego, runs a leasing business ("I'll lease anything"), has invested in a Volvo dealership, owns some trust deeds in real estate, carries some notes and is currently trying to interest enough investors to construct an office building in Mission Valley.

He laughs and says, "I guess you'd call it a David Rehmann Conglomerate."

Of course, he had a head start. Rehmann said he received about $116,000 from the government in compensation and back pay for his imprisonment. But he said his business successes did not come as a result of cashing in on the name-recognition that followed shortly after his release in 1973.

Rehmann explained that it was his face, not his name, that gave him fame.

Shortly after his bomber was shot down over North Vietnam in 1966, his picture was taken as he was paraded through the streets of Hanoi, bruised and with his arm still broken.

A crowd of angry peasants lined the streets, jeering and threatening. Rehmann's face revealed painful defiance.

Another in a Saturday series about persons who made news and what they are doing now.

The photograph became a cause celebre, and much to the Hanoi regime's dismay, it outraged rather than discouraged Americans, sparking a grassroots campaign demanding humane treatment for POWs.

The only time Rehmann said he tried to capitalize on his minor fame was in 1974, shortly after his return.

After being "adopted" by the city of Garden Grove as its official POW (because two of his brothers lived in the city), Rehmann unsuccessfully ran for Congress in the 38th District, which included portions of Buena Park, Garden Grove, Cypress and La Palma.

Rehmann said he ran for "idealistic" reasons, but said the experience was disappointing because "I didn't realize you took such a pounding."

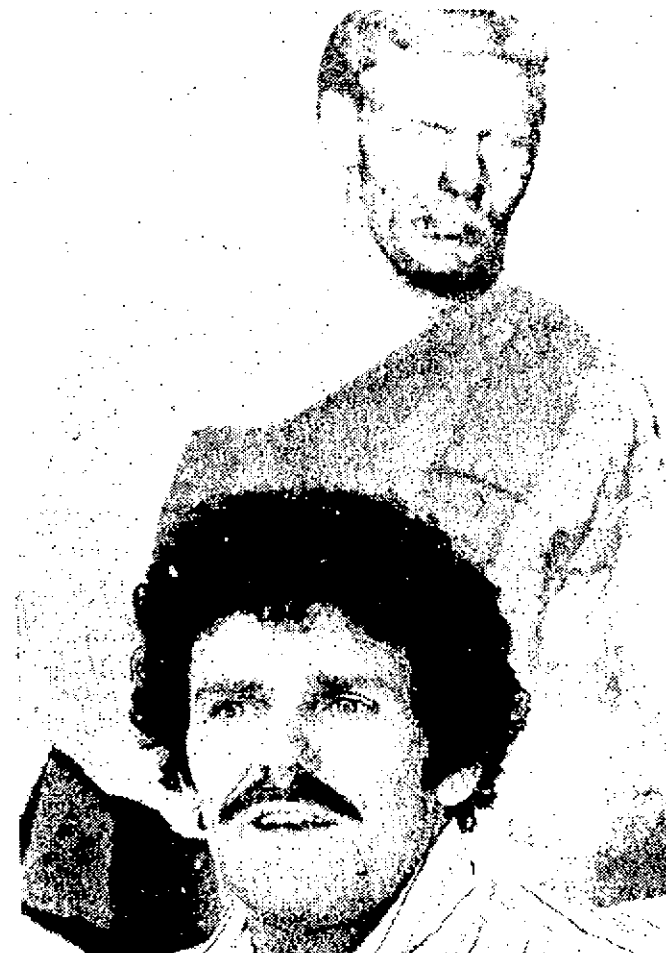

"For six years (in the POW camp) I wasn't able to do anything (about his situation), and when I came back, I could do something," he said, adding that he hadn't anticipated the suspicion he received from the public, doubting his motives.

Rehmann said opponents accused him of insincerity — saying he used his POW status and outspoken sympathy for soldiers missing in action (MIAs) as political stepping stones to office. He sighed and shook his head.

"When you run for office, you open yourself up and take an awful lot of abuse. So I hung it up. I'd gone through enough abuse already."

"If that's the way American people feel about people in office, they deserve the government they get," he said rather bitterly.

So now, Rehmann said, he is protective of his past. His POW memories — which he says now are like a bad dream — are shared only with his closest friends. Or rather, when they get close enough to ask probing questions.

Citizen response was favorable, although a number complained about the lack of seating. Others said ice-cream and popcorn vendors would have been a welcome addition.
A catering service — which ran out of food by 12:30 p.m. — offered salads, sandwiches and a full bar selection.
Additional concerts include: — "Supereussion," Steve Traugh's jazz percussion ensemble, July 22; Rudy Macias Orchestra, Latin music, July 29; Tower Brass Quintet, Aug. 5; "Style," featuring Benny & Patsy Powell's jazz/pop group, Aug. 12; "Dodge City," Jack Lowell's country western band, Aug. 19; the Gary Herbig Ensemble, Aug. 26.

O.C. panel on women wins funds

Orange County's controversial Commission on the Status of Women won funds for another year Friday over the objection of two supervisors and dozens of women who demanded the commission's dissolution.
Supervisors approved the commission's request for a 1977-78 budget of $29,165, a sizable increase from its $16,012 outlay last fiscal year.
Opponents of the commission claimed that it is not representing the women of the county and is politically-motivated. Supervisors Laurence J. Schmit of Garden Grove and Ralph Clark of Anaheim advocated abolishing the commission.

SUPERVISOR Ralph Diedrich of Fullerton led the battle for funding the commission, but called for a redefinition of its goals and objectives.

Diedrich, Supervisor Philip L. Anthony of Westminster and Chairman Thomas F. Riley agreed to require the commission to spell out its objectives and file its report within 60 days.

Betsy Strauss, of Laguna Beach, the commission's president, said part of the expanded budget allowance will be to set up a "rape center." She said presently there is no such service for women in Orange County.

The budget issue drew an overflow crowd to a public hearing room with frequent interruptions by audience objections and rounds of applause.

Anthony suggested the commission be called "something like Woman's Advisory Committee."

Card clubs banned

By Tim Burt
Staff Writer

The Norwalk City Council has approved an ordinance prohibiting a type of card club permitted by state law in which gamblers rent seats and tables to compete only among themselves rather than against dealers.

"We had an initial request several months ago from a club in Anaheim expressing an interest about coming to the city," City Administrator Bill Kraus said.

Anaheim has prohibited new card clubs, although its two existing parlors are being allowed to continue business for another five years, according to Anaheim City Attorney William P. Hopkins.

After the five-year period, city officials then will determine whether to renew the clubs' licenses.

"The council repealed the ordinance (allowing the clubs) because it felt a large number of card club parlors would hurt our family-type image (associated) with Disneyland and all of the other amusements," Hopkins said.

Gardena is the only Southland city to permit the card clubs.

Under state law, gamblers may play poker and a game called Panguingue at a club as long as any money collected by the club goes only to cover rental fees for seats and tables.

"OUR SHERIFF'S department warned us of possible problems such as robberies and muggings once the people get outside of the parlors," said Norwalk Mayor John Zimmerman Jr. "When you have big money winnings there is always a chance of those things happening."

Otherwise, Zimmerman said he doesn't oppose the idea of playing cards.

The penalty for operating a card club parlor in Norwalk is a $10,000 fine or one year in jail, according to Kraus.

Compton school row

She called Mahoney's unscheduled vacation "not very responsible — especially when he just received a raise." Mahoney won a 17 percent raise last month, boosting his salary from $38,000 to $44,000 annually, excluding a $3,000 car allowance.

Dr. Williams said she would not accept the raise if it is offered to her if she is named the superintendent.

"There are more important things in this district for which the money could be used," she said. "I don't think it is good judgment for the board to award the superintendent that kind of raise when it is offering the teachers a 3 percent raise."

The board voted Mahoney the increase at the same meeting it fired Mrs. Williams from the superintendent-designate position.

She said that while she expects to receive a favorable ruling immediately, a setback at this point would not stop her from appealing to a higher court.

She said she would take the case as far as we need to take it. "I have a valid contract. The courts proved that.

"So I am certain I will be reinstated sooner or later. It may be next week, and it may be next year. But I'm certain it will happen."

McGregor, 12, took home ribbons for catching the largest fish — two big, ugly carp — while Jeff Bricker, 14, captured the prize for catching the most fish — 11.

Other ribbons were awarded for the smallest fish. Several youngsters competed for those awards with baby bluegill so small some fisherman might wonder how they got those big hooks in their mouths.

Following the informal awards ceremony on the lake bank, the youngsters climbed aboard their bicycles and rode back to various parks in Lakewood.

Recreation leader Ed Lehman said the day-long activity, which combined a bicycle outing and the fishin' derby, is scheduled to become an annual event for Lakewood youths.
